

A Pandemic Of Fraud

By Ted Kuntz

COVID-19 is described by public health officials, politicians, and the media as a “deadly” condition. As a consequence the majority of the public have a distorted understanding of the level of risk posed by COVID-19, causing unwarranted fear and panic. The World Health Organization (WHO) issued directives to physicians globally to designate all individuals who die and subsequently test positive for COVID-19 as a “COVID-19 death” regardless of the presence of other obvious causes of death. This practice, which is unprecedented in medicine, fraudulently inflates the mortality data. Announcing COVID-19 mortality data without providing any context is misleading. The public is not being given appropriate information to draw their own conclusions about the level of risk posed by COVID-19. Those responsible for the narrative rarely acknowledge that COVID-19 does not affect everyone equally. This means that factors other than the presence of a virus are involved in causing disease and mortality.

There is no substantive evidence to support the contention that people who never develop symptoms can transmit COVID-19, yet this belief is the justification for imposing measures such as face coverings, physical distancing and lockdowns.

PCR Testing FRAUD

The Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) process currently used to diagnose COVID-19 was not designed, nor intended, to diagnose disease. PCR results can be manipulated to increase the likelihood of a “positive” outcome simply by increasing the number of amplification cycles. There is no standardized number of amplification cycles, nor is the number of cycles disclosed with test results. This lack of standardization and transparency increases the potential for fraud. The number of amplification cycles commonly used in Canada is 35 to 45 cycles. It is recognized that when the number of cycles exceeds 35, the accuracy of the PCR process is less than 3%.

Designating a positive PCR result as a “COVID-19 case”, irrespective of other diagnostic criteria, fraudulently inflates COVID-19 case numbers. Never before has the term “case” been applied so recklessly in medicine. Fraudulent case numbers are used to induce fearful compliance with restrictive measures. The PCR testing generates significant profit for the pharmaceutical industry. This is profiting from fraud.

Masking FRAUD

Canadians are subjected to masking mandates

even though there is a lack of scientific evidence for mask wearing in the community setting. A review published in “Emerging Infectious Diseases” found no evidence to support universal mask wearing as a protective measure to reduce illness. A scientific review which focused on randomized controlled studies found that universal mask wearing did include placing healthy people under quarantine, have never before been implemented in over 100 years of public health policy.

The medical industry, public health and the mainstream media promote the false narrative that vaccines are the only viable approach to the management and prevention of COVID-19. Treatments such as Hydroxychloroquine (HCQ) and Ivermectin, drugs that have been used safely for decades, are now deemed unsafe while the injection of never before used synthetic pathogens and genetic technology, with unknown short and long-term impacts, is deemed to be safe. The beneficial impact of vitamins C and D, zinc, and the antibiotic Azithromycin in the prevention and treatment of COVID-19 is rarely acknowledged by Canadian health officials. Country-by-country data shows that easy access to HCQ is strongly linked to lower COVID-19 mortality.

In spite of this, Canadians are denied access to HCQ and Ivermectin.

The Pfizer and Moderna vaccines have not been granted final approval. These products have been given “interim approval” only during a declared state of emergency. Governments appear unwilling to remove the state of emergency or acknowledge other effective treatments as this would negate the legality of using these unapproved products.

COVID-19 Vaccine FRAUD

The Pfizer and Moderna products do not function as a typical vaccine. They involve the injection of synthetic (man-made) pathogens and genetic technology. These products are technically a “medical device”. These medical devices have been declared “safe” even though Phase IV safety trials have not been completed. The results of these human trials will not be available until 2023. These medical devices have been declared “effective” even though manufacturers have not demonstrated that their product prevents infection or transmission, nor whether the device will result in a reduction in severe illness, hospitalization or death. These medical devices contain never before used mRNA/DNA technology. The long-term impact is unknown. Those receiving these medical devices are test subjects in an experiment. Pregnant women are encouraged to take this medical device even though no testing has been conducted to prove the device is safe for the woman and her fetus.

Politicians state that a COVID-19 “vaccine” will not be mandatory. However, coercive measures are proposed to restrict access to services, government benefits, medical treatment, travel and employment for those who do not comply. This makes the vaccine effectively mandatory. Declarations that life will not reduce influenza-like illness. Denis Rancourt PhD conducted a thorough review of the scientific literature related to the use of face coverings for the Ontario Civil Liberties Association concluding: “No randomized clinical trial with verified outcome shows a benefit for community members to wearing a mask. There is no such study. There are no exceptions.”

There’s also evidence of risks associated with prolonged cloth mask usage. For example, a study published in the “British Medical Journal” in 2015 found that risk of infection in hospital workers using cloth masks were 3 times higher when compared to not wearing masks at all. A CDC analysis revealed that 85% of patients testing positive for COVID-19 wore face masks “often” or “always” in the two weeks preceding their positive test.

Treatment of COVID-19 FRAUD

Current widespread lockdown measures, which

This Lockdown Ends Now!

By Jason Kowalyshyn

Canada has experienced intermittent lockdowns over the past year, and the city of Toronto has been under a strict lockdown since November 23, 2020 with no solid end in sight. These restrictions are in place, we are told, due to a high number of “cases” and yet there is very little common knowledge regarding how doctors or scientists actually determine if someone has COVID-19.

As citizens, we naturally assume that determining whether or not someone has the virus which collapsed our economy and claimed lives, would not be the subject of controversy. Unfortunately, just like the way our government operates, and where there is incalculable billions to be made, there is corruption. Being that a polymerase chain reaction (PCR) test is what the government uses to determine whether or not an area, province or country should be in lockdown, we would like to believe that the test is faultless. But it isn’t.

For a doctor or scientist to determine whether or not someone has SARS-CoV-2 (the virus that causes COVID-19), the person is subjected to a PCR test. This test consists of ramming an 8 inch Q-tip up your nasal passage and collecting material from deep within your sinus cavity. This genetic material is then sent to a lab where a PCR test is performed to determine whether or not the person was COVID-19 positive or negative.

The PCR test is able to amplify the most infinitesimal genetic samples through what is referred to as cycle thresholds. Each time you amplify the material, you increase the cycle threshold, and it exponentially increases the ability to detect predetermined genetic material. If at first the lab technician gets a negative result, they continue to increase the cycle threshold to what should be a reasonable level of amplification until they are satisfied that no genetic material found in COVID-19 can be detected.

If a patient were to test positive at a low cycle threshold, less than 10 cycles for example, this means they have a high viral load and had so much of the genetic material the test was looking for that a positive test result came more easily. If the patient does not test positive until a much higher rate of magnification, such as 20 cycles or higher, then it means they have an incredibly low viral load, are likely not infectious and do not require quarantine. It would be nearly impossible for them to spread the virus to others.

According to most scientists, the test should never be taken above 30 cycles because after the material is magnified to that degree, the test can pick up any genetic material, including contamination from the lab or handling of the sample, and it will give a false positive test result.

Even politicians and their staffers understand this. On July 30, 2020 at a Doug Ford press conference, the deputy chief medical officer for Ontario, Dr. Barbara Yaffe noted that “if you’re testing in a population that doesn’t have very much Covid, you’ll get false positives almost half the time, that is if the person doesn’t have Covid, they may have something else, they may have nothing.” At this point, many concerned citizens, who might not have been aware of the situation began to question using a test that produces so many false positives.

Last July Dr. Anthony Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) and lead member of the White House coronavirus task force, said “If you get a cycle threshold of 35 or more, the chances of it being replication-competent are miniscule... you almost never can culture virus from a 37-threshold cycle ... even 36 – it’s just dead nucleoids, period.” In essence, if you dial up the cycle threshold too high, a high degree of sample contamination could take place – plus nearly anyone who has been remotely exposed to someone with COVID or closely related viruses within the past few weeks would also test positive, whether or not they are actually actively infected by SARS-Cov-2 or not.

The relevance of Dr. Fauci’s statements can be explained quite easily by a study that was published in Clinical Infectious Diseases on September 28th, 2020.

The study explains that when a patient’s PCR test requires a cycle threshold of 35 to test positive there is a 97% chance that positive is a false positive! That sort of error could push up the level of false positives to several orders of magnitude higher than the actual numbers.

This begs the question, what cycle threshold are we using here in Canada? According to the Canadian Journal of Clinical Virology, labs in Ontario average between 38-45 cycles for Covid-19 PCR testing. And according to the JCV, no labs in Canada use less than a 33-cycle threshold. Meaning, Canada is swimming in a sea of false positives and asymptomatic, non-contagious people. It is time we seriously question the harsh lockdowns and infringements upon our rights and freedoms the government has forced upon us, claiming to be in the best interest of public health.

At least one other important flaw with the PCR test should be mentioned and noted: the test cannot differentiate between a live active virus and dead inert viral fragments. In fact, a study done by the journal

Microorganisms found that most people continued to test positive for an additional 30 days after their first positive test, long after the virus has left them. If an individual had a high enough viral load that they experienced symptoms, they could test positive for months!

On November 27, 2020 a team of 22 world class scientists published a review article in Research Gate that was sent to Eurosurveillance, which pointed out the 10 fundamental flaws of the PCR test pertaining to COVID-19; then two weeks later on December 14, the WHO issued a statement noting that perhaps the PCR test was too sensitive, and a lowering of the cycle threshold sensitivity could be considered, as a way to eliminate background noise. On January 21, 2021, the WHO released guidance to laboratories in the United States and around the world to lower the cycle threshold in PCR tests to get a more accurate representation of Covid cases.

Several scientific institutes, universities and prominent epidemiology experts in around the world including The Infectious Disease Society of America think the same: the cycle threshold on PCR testing should be lowered. There is no need to set a cycle threshold above 30 unless the goal is inflated statistics. Unfortunately, doctors are not given the cycle threshold at which a patient tests positive, which would easily determine whether or not they are infectious and require quarantine. So, people who test positive under the current regime are sent home and told to self-isolate regardless of whether or not they had symptoms. It would be important to see a breakdown of exactly what cycle threshold each patient tested positive at, but this information has not been collected in a manner that is available to doctors, scientists, or the public.

In an article published last August, The New York Times reviewed data testing sets compiled by officials in Massachusetts with a Ct threshold of 40-cycles, and their findings showed that 85-90% of positive results didn’t appear positive until after 30 cycles.

With labs in Ontario maxing out between 38 and 45 cycles and knowing that above a 35-cycle threshold the test may produce 97% false positives, we need to ask our elected officials to justify using positive case statistics as a means to manufacture consent or authority to collapse our economy, by decimating small privately owned businesses and then transferring the wealth of the small business sector to select corporate entities.

Any reasonable solution would not be so focused on “cases” and economic transfers to the wealthy, it would be focused on actual patients with actual symptoms. The covid PCR test is not accurate or qualified to justify restricting the movement of healthy people – which is why we must unitedly declare... THIS LOCKDOWN ENDS NOW!

Are The Public Being Duped?

not return to normal without a COVID-19 “vaccine” are unconscionable marketing and fear mongering strategies that have no basis whatsoever in medical treatment.

COVID-19 Measures FRAUD

Big box businesses are allowed to remain open while small independent businesses are severely restricted or closed. Governments arbitrarily declare which businesses are essential and which are deemed to be non-essential. The public is permitted to fly in airplanes but prevented from attending church. Those who question the claims of the government and insist that measures be evidence-based are considered a danger to society. Information that challenges the COVID-19 narrative is censored regardless of merit, expertise or credentials. This censorship prevents open and honest debate, the hallmark of a democratic society. Censorship also undermines the scientific process.

No government has publicly announced their pandemic intervention plan including their target outcomes. The failure to declare the plan prevents citizens from holding their governments accountable. The catastrophic impact of COVID-19 measures on human health, the economy, and our way of life is not being calculated, nor reported to the public. There is no accountability, transparency or evidence to demonstrate that the benefits of current measures outweigh the risks. There is no evidence that restrictive measures such as face coverings, distancing, and lockdowns are effective in reducing rates of COVID-19 infection. There is abundant evidence these measures are harmful to individual and community health. COVID-19 measures violate the most fundamental rights of Canadians.

How Are Covid Deaths Being Counted?

By Adam Millward

788 that’s the number of people under 60 in Canada who died “with” COVID from the start of the “pandemic” up until Feb 12, 2021.

Last year the computer models assumed that the same COVID-19 death rate seen in Italy’s long term care homes would be the death rate for the general public. Somewhere between 7-12%. That puts estimates at somewhere between 300-600 million dead worldwide. Those were the estimates health authorities and politicians started to use to create COVID related public health policies. In anticipation of piles of dead bodies that may still be contagious and to speed up the process of recording these anticipated deaths, countries all around the world changed the way deaths are recorded, and the way dead bodies are handled. Instead of autopsies actually being performed, anyone who was even merely suspected of having COVID when they died, was to be counted as a COVID death.

Definition of a COVID death in Quebec: “Even if they die from cancer or another disease if they’ve got COVID-19 they’re gonna be counted as COVID-19.” – Horatio Arruda, Quebec Health Minister Definition of COVID death in Ontario: “Deaths are included whether or not COVID-19 was determined to be a contributing or underlying cause of death.” – Ontario COVID information page that reports daily deaths and hospitalizations.

Definition of COVID death in Illinois: “Technically even if you died of a clear alternate cause, but you had COVID at the same time, it’s still listed as a COVID death.” – Dr. Ngozi Ezike, Illinois Department of Public Health

Definition of a COVID death in the UK: “Deaths of people who have had a positive test result for COVID-19 and died within 28 days of the first positive test.” – UK government coronavirus data website.

In all these places, the majority of the deaths were elderly people in long term care homes, with other contributing or direct causes of death (comorbidity) The media never reports that though. The majority of working age people who tested positive for COVID will either remain asymptomatic, or have relatively mild symptoms and recover relatively quickly. Yet the fear instilled by the media is probably causing a lot of younger very low risk people to visit hospitals, now concerned they have COVID. They are sent home the same day and told they’re not really in danger, and to quarantine. Yet, they all count towards the daily COVID hospitalization numbers.

I’m tired of this charade. Frontline healthcare workers need to speak up. They’ve been treating mainly elderly patients brought to them from long term care homes this entire time. They need to speak up about the general ill health of these patients that’s often partly due to neglect. Yet, none of them speak up. None of them say anything about restrictions on the rest of society that make no sense because if they do, they could be “cancelled” by everyone who has been told lies and half truths over and over for almost a year now. Some who have bravely spoken out, have even lost their jobs. Meanwhile, millions of people are living under lockdowns and curfews. Thousands and thousands of businesses are closing. People are losing their jobs, businesses and homes. And all the while, people get mad at others who talk about the truth and accuse them of being conspiracy theorists and dangers to public health.

By this point, if you’re not asking questions and having doubts about the official story, I think you’re the one who might be a danger to public health. I think you might be a danger to the concept of a free country and democracy. Lockdowns are harming people. Point fingers where they should be pointed – at politicians and health experts who made terrible mistakes and won’t admit them. Instead they spend millions on advertising, reminding you to call the cops if your neighbours have a gathering. And they make you think they’re doing it to help struggling small newspapers and radio stations who lost ad dollars because half their normal ad clients are “non-essential.” I’m tired of being called “non-essential.”

Justice Centre Sues Federal Government For Forcible Confinement Of Travellers

Justice Centre For Constitutional Freedoms

TORONTO: The Justice Centre has filed legal action against the Federal Government in response to Prime Minister Justin Trudeau declaring to the media that Canadians returning from travel will be forcibly confined in hotels at a cost of $2,000 per traveller even though they return in possession of a negative PCR test.

The Justice Centre first sent a legal demand letter to Minister of Transport Omar Alghabra on January 29, 2021 warning it would sue in Federal Court if the government proceeded with its threat to confine returning Canadians at secret locations, even those who had already tested negative for Covid.

The Justice Centre represents 13 individual applicants, including Steve Duesing, pictured above, in the comprehensive new lawsuit and is advising dozens more.

The non-profit law firm and registered charity has received thousands of emails of outrage from travelling Canadians since the federal government first announced that all citizens, regardless of their reason for travel, would be forced to have a Covid PCR test in order to board an airplane upon returning to Canada, then be forced to take another PCR test on arrival, and then be forcibly confined for up to three days while waiting for a negative test result, and also be forced to pay $2,000.

Anyone who tests positive after returning to Canada will be “immediately required to quarantine in designated government facilities,” according to Mr. Trudeau. The government is contracting security guards to enforce mandatory quarantines, with the added threat of arrest and jail for Canadians who refuse to be forcibly confined in a federal facility. On February 9, the government announced that anyone arriving by land without a negative PCR test could face fines up to $3,000. As of February 22, travellers will also be required to submit to another Covid test towards the end of a mandatory 14-day quarantine. Additional applicants may be added to the legal action as the Justice Centre proceeds.

Justice Centre lawyer Sayeh Hassan notes that Canadians travel for many reasons and the Charter guarantees the fundamental right to enter and leave Canada. “Prime Minister Trudeau has arbitrarily made special exceptions for Olympic athletes and their support teams, for example,” notes Ms. Hassan.

“Citizens are being held unlawfully despite not having been convicted of any offence, not having had access to a lawyer, and not having appeared before a judge. Law enforcement officers are apparently refusing to inform family members of where their loved ones are being held. This outrageous policy aligns with the world’s most repressive and undemocratic regimes and is totally unacceptable,” adds Ms. Hassan.

“Quarantine, particularly of healthy or asymptomatic individuals, is the functional equivalent of house arrest and the Justice Centre will not allow it to continue unchallenged.”

The Justice Centre For Constitutional Freedoms is a Canadian legal organization and federally registered charity that defends citizens’ fundamental freedoms under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, through pro bono legal representation and through educating Canadians about the free society.

Rules for Thee, But Not for Me

By Kenneth Shrew

Presented here, is a list of politicians and other authority figures who seem to think they are “above the law.” Quite an interesting phenomenon taking place during this COVID fiasco. We are seeing more and more of our leaders thinking the draconian rules regarding distancing, lockdowns, and mask wearing are not rules that apply to them. Why? Well, there are some rather obvious possibilities in answering that question.

In no particular order, let’s start with the onslaught of “Christmas cheaters.” Apparently quite a gaggle of politicians decided the Christmas “lockdown” just wasn’t going to apply to them. According to numerous news sources, Tracey Allard, an Alberta government minister, confessed that she and her family headed for Hawaii this past Christmas. Her reason? It was a family tradition. Apparently, word got out and Allard was greeted on her return by a group of angry Canadians brandishing signs saying, “Aloha Allard.” Ontario’s finance minister, Rod Phillips also flew the coop during the Yuletide season to a cozy tropical island and was a bit deceitful about it posting on social media a Christmas Eve greeting, complete with a nice roaring fire in the family fireplace (in Toronto) that later was discovered to have been pre-recorded. He lost his job over it.

Earlier in the spring when all this COVID hysteria started (March 20, 2020) Patty Hajdu, Minister of Health, adamantly warned Canadians that there would be strict penalties for anyone refusing to comply with public health recommendations. She is quoted as saying, “Let me be perfectly clear: We will use every measure in our toolbox at the federal level to ensure compliance. No exceptions.” No exceptions except other government officials, of course – or so it seems. Some have lost their jobs, or been seriously reprimanded, but typically they are forgiven with a slap on the wrist, while the rest of us experience serious fines and at times arrest.

In early 2020 Toronto’s Mayor, John Tory, apologized profusely for taking his mask off while talking to protesters in Trinity Bellwoods Park in Toronto, breaking distancing rules as well. His apology was enough to avoid any other more serious action. Our own Prime Minister Justin Trudeau flouted the country’s own set rules by visiting his family over Easter, traveling across the border from Ontario to Quebec. Ontario’s illustrious Premier, Doug Ford, invited his two daughters, who do not live with him, to his house on Mother’s Day. Meanwhile ordinary citizens are being fined $880 per infringement of physical distancing rules, such as rollerblading in a public parking lot. Even when the lot is empty!

Most Canadians apparently want violators to be punished for infringements (according to a poll conducted in partnership with the Association for Canadian Studies and Leger). But it stands to reason that would include everyone and not exclude politicians.

More defiant folks who apparently believe they are above the rules: Liberal MP Kamal Khara and Sameer Zuberi both left their posts after traveling internationally, against the rules, during the Christmas holidays. Three other Liberal MP’s also took summer trips abroad as “they required to complete essential family affairs.” MP Alexandra Mendès travelled to Portugal last July, MP Lyne Bessette flew to Mexico via Massachusetts in August, and MP Patricia Lattanzio skipped over to Ireland in September. Conservative MP David Sweet ended up resigning after his jaunt to the US during the holidays. NDP MP Niki Ashton, after sharing her dubious travel to Greece to visit her ailing grandmother, lost her government station. Senate Opposition Leader Don Plett travelled to Mexico for part of his Christmas holiday ignoring government advisories forbidding international travel. Jeremy Nixon (MLA for the Alberta riding of Calgary-Klein), Pat Rehn (Nixon’s legislative colleague representing Lesser Slave Lake) and Tanya Fir (Calgary area MLA) got off the hook by making a social media public apology for ignoring similar restrictions set for all – that’s it. There are so many of these blatant violations it seems to be rather habitual amongst the “political elite”, and clearly in defiance of rules that were established for all of us, not just ordinary citizens.

These infringements are not limited to just breaking travel restrictions, and/or gathering with family, but also for breaking rules around social distancing and other pandemic restrictions. In July, a CTV News report appeared citing nine Ontario politicians who were being accused of holding a public event in Owen Sound. The Beards for Bucks fundraiser included, in attendance, Progressive Conservative MPP Bill Walker, Conservative MP Alex Russ, Owen Sound Mayor Ian Boddy, Southgate Mayor John Woodbury, Hanover Deputy Mayor Selwyn Hicks, Grey Highlands Deputy Mayor Aaskash Desal and Owen Sound Councillors Travis Dodd, Richard Thomas and Scott Grieg. All of these politicians had their beards trimmed by professionals as part of the fundraising cause. “Any services that tend to a customer’s face” are a specific “no no” under Stage 2 restrictions (Toronto.com description of Stage 2 restrictions). So why is this fundraiser exempt while professional hair salons are going out of business left and right due to these same restrictions?

One such professional, Mindy Biggar, the owner of an Owen Sound spa, claims that she has lost 80% of her business due to the Stage 2 restrictions. These politicians were obviously not wearing masks while their beards were trimmed. What gives?

There are many more violators than are listed in this article, and then many, many more in the US and other countries. It is a pandemic of “rules for thee, but not for me.” Although many of the politicians in these examples are punished in some way – by losing their jobs or being stripped of their government roles – it makes one wonder how many others go unnoticed. What happened to the adage “we are all in this together” and that “community unity in crises” concept that has been crammed down our throats since last March? It appears to this writer that these people don’t see the same urgency, and potential danger, they expect the rest of us to see – and respond to. An Alberta ER physician, Dr. Shazma Mithani stated these politicians who give no respect to the rules that the province and that Canada has decided are necessary to control this virus, constitutes a “slap in the face.” Or do they know something they aren’t sharing with the general public? – that maybe this situation is not quite as serious as they want us to believe it is?

The most egregious infraction of all comes from the City of Winnipeg where the Chief Provincial Public Health Officer, Dr. Brent Roussin announced, “our public health orders don’t apply to any levels of government, so they don’t apply to federal, provincial or municipal governments.” Really? In this case the reference was to the opening of gym facilities in several government locations, but his rather clear comment certainly applies to all “public health orders”. In the meantime, privately owned gyms, for the rest of us, are closed.

Helen Salako, a personal trainer at Featbody in Winnipeg said, “I watch the news every day waiting for the restrictions to be lifted and it’s a betrayal that other things like personal trainers’ studios have to be closed because the city’s fitness studio is open.”

Rules for thee, but not for me. How true indeed.

Study Finds CDC Inflated Covid Numbers by 1,600%

A peer-reviewed study contends the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention violated federal law by inflating Coronavirus fatality numbers.

The figures were inflated by at least 1,600%, according to the Public Health Initiative of the Institute for Pure and Applied Knowledge, which published the study, titled “COVID-19 Data Collection, Comorbidity & Federal Law: A Historical Retrospective.” The study asserts that the CDC willfully violated multiple federal laws, including the Information Quality Act, Paperwork Reduction Act and Administrative Procedures Act, reported the National File.

In January, as WND reported, the World Health Organization admitted the “gold-standard” PCR tests used to determine whether or not a person is infected with COVID-19 are not reliable on the first try and a second test might be needed.

That fact, the National File notes, corresponds with the CDC’s “quiet admission that it blended viral and antibody test results for its case numbers and that people can test positive on an antibody test if they have antibodies from a family of viruses that cause the common cold.”

Among the notable findings in the study is the conclusion that the CDC “illegally enacted new rules for data collection and reporting exclusively for COVID-19 that resulted in a 1,600% inflation of current COVID-19 fatality totals,” the watchdog group All Concerned Citizens said in a statement provided to National File. “The research demonstrates that the CDC failed to apply for mandatory federal oversight and failed to open a mandatory period for public scientific comment in both instances as is required by federal law before enacting new rules for data collection and reporting,” the group said.

The study pointed out that on March 24, 2020 the CDC published an alert instructing medical examiners, coroners and physicians to de-emphasize underlying causes of death, also known as pre-existing conditions or comorbidities. On its website, the CDC says, just 6% of the people counted as COVID-19 deaths died of COVID-19 alone.

The researchers estimated the COVID-19 recorded fatalities “are inflated nationwide by as much as 1600% above what they would be, had the CDC used the 2003 handbooks,” said All Concerned Citizens.

The CDC adopted additional rules on April 14th, 2020 exclusively for COVID-19 “in violation of federal law by outsourcing data collection rule development to the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists (CSTE), a non-profit entity, again without applying for oversight and opening opportunity for public scientific review,” the organization said.

The CSTE published a position paper creating “new rules for counting probable cases as actual cases without definitive proof of infection, new rules for contact tracing allowing contact tracers to practice medicine without a license, and yet refused to define new rules for ensuring that the same person could not be counted multiple times as a new case.”

The researchers allege the CDC “significantly inflated data that has been used by elected officials and public health officials, in conjunction with unproven projection models from the Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation (IHME), to justify extended closures for schools, places of worship, entertainment, and small businesses leading to unprecedented emotional and economic hardships nationwide.”

All Concerned Citizens said it has sent a formal petition to the Department of Justice and all U.S. Attorneys seeking an immediate grand jury investigation into the allegations.

The Metaverse: Prepare To Meet Your Digital Twin

By Guy Crittenden

About a decade ago I briefly dated a woman who'd recently broken up with a man in Florida, whom she'd never actually met. Turns out they met in an online "game" called Second Life. In Second Life, people interact through "avatars" (or characters) that can be customized, along with their environments. It's like The Sims, but with more freedom and control, and you're one of the characters yourself.

She'd even been engaged to this guy, which is apparently common. However, she suspected he was having an affair in the game, and shrunk her avatar to the size of a grain of rice. She then placed herself on the desk in his virtual office where she'd overheard him carrying on with the "other woman".

I looked further into Second Life and was amazed. Second Life has a digital currency called Linden dollars that can be exchanged for dollars in the real world. Big brands like Coca-Cola were purchasing billboard space on virtual street corners even back then, to capture the eyeballs of the thousands of people (or avatars) passing by each day. One guy became the first virtual real estate millionaire after selling lots on an island paradise everyone wanted a piece of, that he'd constructed with the help of programmers in India. He converted his Second Life Linden dollars to a million US greenbacks. I even read somewhere that intelligence agents monitor Second Life to thwart the plans of terrorists, who congregate in such places as virtual mosques to discuss plans, as scheming in the physical world is dangerous.

I didn't think much more about Second Life until a few years later when I read about a famous experiment with Pokémon in which people wearing special glasses chased 3D animated characters in the real world. Disturbingly, the CIA apparently monitored people's behaviour as the characters led players to specific business locations like Dairy Queen.

Fast forward to today, and we find the key elements of Second Life and the Pokémon live exercise are merging in a vast enterprise that's about to completely transform the way human beings live and interact.

In 2019 Wired magazine's Kevin Kelly wrote a cover story titled, "Welcome to the Mirrorworld" in which he described an augmented reality that's about to be deployed by Silicon Valley firms in concert with governments. He wrote: "[We] are building a 1-to-1 map of almost unimaginable scope. When it's complete, our physical reality will merge with the digital universe." In other words, each of us will have a digital twin, house, workspace and almost anything else you can think of, that's a copy of the real thing. Imagine, say, Google Maps "street view" experienced through a VR headset—a totally immersive environment in which you not only walk past convincing facsimiles of real houses, but enter the front door, pick up objects, and talk to the inhabitants. Gone will be the clunky graphics and buffering of Second Life a decade ago: this will be a compellingly-realistic world.

Just as porn drove rapid technological innovation in the video and online industry, sex will likely put innovation into hyperdrive in the digital metaverse. Instead of "watching" adult videos online, imagine interacting with others in whatever orgiastic fantasy you, (and they) wish to create. This won't just be visual either: consider that some Japanese men already pay to wear special suits fitted with stimulating sensors, to interact with girlish anime characters.

From this perspective, the Silicon Valley firms commercializing this new tech will benefit massively from COVID-19 and all its protocols of distancing and having people confined at home during lockdown. With "geofencing" coming into effect and vaccine passports ending travel as we knew it, people will be incentivized to travel virtually, socialize online, and even fulfill their sexual fantasies in the metaverse.

Uploading the World

Of course, it's already happening. Corporations have figured out they can save money with a reduced real estate footprint, shuttering office towers as more people work remotely. Telemedicine and online learning are becoming the norm. The pandemic has normalized such things as family reunions on Zoom, graduation ceremonies on Minecraft, weddings held on Animal Crossing, and trying out different outfits or hairstyles online. Few realize this is just the early days of the population being herded into the mirror world or metaverse, which is also called the Magicverse, AR Cloud, Live Maps and Spatial internet. Facebook is beta testing a virtual reality social media platform called Horizon; Microsoft, Magic Leap and Niantic are working on their own versions.

At this point you're imagining the metaverse as a built environment you access virtually from home, but it also projects into the real world. (The definition of "real" will soon be under revision.) You'll soon step outside wearing updated versions of Google eyeglasses and other

"wearable tech" and see the normal world augmented with digital images and information. You've heard of Elon Musk's "Neuralink" brain-machine interface—an early version of which was unveiled in August 2020 by way of a pig named Gertrude with a coin-size chip implanted in her brain. Soon the tech will be implanted in humans, who will no longer need to don clunky VR headsets or wear devices.

A demonstration of this is better than a written description, ergo I link at the end of this article to a short YouTube demo video. In essence, people will experience a digital overlay of their visual and sensory experience.

Imagine walking down the street past store signs and billboards in which every message is customized to you. Arrows will guide you to your destination, without your having to consult a map on your cell phone. When you sit at a restaurant, the menu will appear in your field of vision, highlighting suggestions based on past preferences. You'll learn the calories in a dish just by pointing at it. Instead of taking a photo of a person or scene, you'll simply say, (or think!) "save to library" for future viewing. Did you forget the name of a coworker? No problem: their name tag will pop up beside them. Forget staring into a television screen while you ride an exercise bike?; you'll enjoy riding through the Alps or along a tropical beach in a completely immersive environment.

Undoubtedly this technology is interesting and "cool." Much of it could add true value to our experience, but there's a potentially coercive dimension. American investigative journalist discovered documents via a FOIA request that the CIA and other intelligence agencies have been in close communication with Silicon Valley execs planning what sounds like an Orwellian dystopia of total surveillance along the lines of the Chinese social credit score system and its network of hundreds of millions of facial recognition cameras that feed AI algorithms.

Adobe Aero already has "behaviour builder" technology. Given the investment in 5G that can monitor our biometrics even while we sleep, and tell when a woman is ovulating or whether our blood pressure is high, can we trust Big Data not to combine all this tech in AI tyranny? These developments are bounding ahead of much-needed privacy rights discussions. It's one thing for my Google glasses to remind me of Bob's name at the office water cooler, or help me get it on with Sailor Moon; it's another matter if the tech allows the state to read my negative emotions while I watch a speech from the Supreme Leader and decide I can't ride the bullet train tomorrow morning, or even leave my house.

Fiverr for All

A side effect of the pandemic (some might say its intention), has been the destruction of hundreds of thousands of restaurants and businesses in North America alone. Many will never recover, and their former employees will soon be offered a Universal Basic Income (UBI) while robots take over their jobs. When US President Joe Biden extolled that if a 50-year-old can shovel coal into a blast furnace, they can be retrained to "write code" he was alluding to what's called the "gig economy." This is a job market with no security in which people will be retrained over and over to perform the drudge work of all this digital stuff, which World Economic Forum (WEF) leader Klaus Schwab calls the Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR). (Note that Schwab explicitly cheerleads for the combining of human anatomy and digital technology.)

As extolled in its famous "You will own nothing and you will be happy" infomercial, the WEF is promoting a two-tier economic system in which a billionaire neo-aristocracy will preside over a digital proletariat crammed into megacities, living in 300-foot apartments they won't own, whose living rooms will be used for meetings by strangers when they're out performing some assigned task. The gig economy is already well represented by the technology platform Fiverr, in which workers from around the planet bid on freelance assignments advertised by people in need of everything from a new website to, well, almost anything you can think of. While the platform currently skews currently to graphic design and computer jobs, the template can (and will), be expanded to any and all work. This is promoted positively, the idea being that an elderly or disabled person could be empowered to participate in the economy, and distance will be erased. For example, if farming is done with large remote-controlled machines, a handicapped person could harvest crops in Guatemala from their desk in New York for a few hours in the morning, before performing note-taking duties at a virtual board meeting later in the day in San Francisco.

It all sounded innocent enough when things got rolling a decade ago. Back in 2011, Second Life founder Philip Rosedale launched a venture called Coffee & Power—a San Francisco-based startup that raised $1 million in funding from Amazon CEO and founder Jeff Bezos, Greylock Partners, Mitch Kapor, Catamount Ventures and Kevin Rose. The company leveraged its Worklist, which allows programmers to develop and receive payment for small pieces of code.

Like Fiverr, the platform is a virtual marketplace for gig economy tasks. It has its own currency and payment system called "coffee dollars," a chat feature and game-like ratings and reviews. Integrated with maps, people can use SMS and mobile phones to offer or bid on jobs, which are called "missions." It was launched with a physical space, too, where people can meet and share a boardroom or a temporary desk. (You may have noticed such shared temporary workplaces popping up in your town or city.) Competitors in the space back in 2011 included Zaarly, TaskRabbit and Gigwalk.

It all sounded new and exciting, until we fast-forward to today and look carefully at Microsoft's patent—the one with the alarming "060606" in the title—for technology that will allow the company to surveil a person's biodata and "mine" the actions of a person (e.g., a person tasked to watch a video, or play a game), in a manner similar to the way people mine Bitcoin with computers.

It seems the economy is being "gamified" and we're the tokens on the game board. And if that doesn't scare you enough, let me leave you with one final thought: when eventually the machines can perform all these tasks, and there's no need for workers, what will become of us?

If you believe the message on that strange henge structure in Georgia, the answer may be written in stone. [For a demonstration of the "metaverse" visit the Adobe Creative Cloud channel on YouTube, and watch the video "Adobe MAX 2019: Adobe Aero | Adobe Creative Cloud." The demo starts about two minutes in.]

The Treatment of Viral Diseases: Has the Truth Been Suppressed for Decades?

By Dr Lee Merritt

Since I started medical school in 1976, until 2020, I have heard the dogma that viral diseases are not treatable (with some exceptions such as antivirals for HIV/AIDS), certainly not with antimicrobials. My older son, a newly minted general surgeon, was educated much more recently, but with the same misunderstanding. Since viral diseases are not treatable, our only weapon is vaccination.

As the “pandemic” broke out, I constantly watched and read online publications. After reading about the Chinese, Indian, and Korean use of hydroxychloroquine (HCQ), an antimalarial agent, against coronavirus, within an hour I found more than 20 scientific papers, written in the last 40 years on the use of lysosomotropic agents—specifically chloroquine—to treat viruses. Like Rip Van Winkle, I suddenly awoke, after decades, to a completely new medical reality.

How could all our medical education “overlook” this basic science?

It may be difficult for non-physicians to appreciate the magnitude of this world-shaking scientific omission—and probable cover-up. It is the pharmaceutical equivalent of being told for 40 years the world is flat—only to have it conclusively exposed overnight to be round. This idea that viruses—like the current pandemic SARS-CoV-2 virus—can be killed by commonly used drugs—antibiotics, antimalarial, or antiparasitic agents—profoundly changes the practice of medicine.

Influenza

The scientific paper that first got me thinking about a potential motive to hide this data concerns the in vitro inhibition of human influenza A virus replication by chloroquine (CQ). It was published in 2006. This paper and others, including one published in 2005 about the effectiveness of CQ against SARS-CoV-1, the cause of severe acute respiratory syndrome, show CQ, from which HCQ is derived, to be extremely effective against some viruses.

Given the supposed concern of health officials over deaths by influenza, why was the research into CQ not pursued? Consider that the entire $69 billion-per-year vaccine industry is based on “preventing” viral diseases that are otherwise “untreatable”—like viral influenza A, measles, etc. If a cheap and effective treatment is available for these illnesses, the entire vaccine industry crashes down like a house of cards.

Until the coronavirus pandemic, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) website has been a non-stop advertisement for vaccines—especially the influenza vaccine. We are constantly told in the news and commercials to “Get your flu vaccine!” because of the risk of death from the seasonal influenza virus.

According to the CDC, 80,000 people died in the U.S. last year from the flu. That itself is a lie. In truth, actual viral influenza accounts for only a fraction of those deaths. The CDC and World Health Organization (WHO) once reported real numbers of influenza cases—and most people assume they still do. But they actually report ILI or “influenza like illness,” and in the past they added the caveat that only 4–7 percent of ILI was influenza—the rest were other respiratory viruses. So, when they say 80,000 people died, only about 6,000 actually had viral influenza.

Previously, in tables of ILI deaths, a small box at the bottom would tell you the percentage of ILI that is influenza. The CDC no longer does that, and currently, looking at multiple yearly reports, I am unable to determine the percentage of ILI that is true influenza from the CDC website. This distortion by reporting big scary numbers began when the flu vaccine became profitable through the use of adjuvants and “soft mandates”—i.e. pushing hospitals and police forces and other professions to vaccinate their staff to “protect the public.” Of course, the flu vaccine only works against flu—not other causes of ILI.

Treatment vs. Vaccination in Other Viral Diseases

Vaccinating the entire nation against influenza to prevent 6,000 deaths is hard to justify, but the bigger lie is even worse. Based on the currently available science, it is probable that treatment with HCQ in patients with severe influenza and ILI could have saved millions of Americans from dying. And people within the inner circle of pharmaceutical research must have known this. Pharmaceutical firms employ thousands of virologists and infectious disease experts. Are we to believe they failed to read and pursue the relevant viral research? And, this is not just about influenza and SARS-CoV-2, but hepatitis, viral meningitis, equine encephalitis, shingles, human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), possibly leukemia, and other deadly known viral diseases. Were deaths from such viral diseases, over decades, an acceptable price for $69 billion in yearly vaccine profits?

Vaccination began with smallpox, then polio. Then vaccination programs expanded to childhood viral illnesses, including usually benign ones such as mumps. Influenza then became the big vaccine target.

Along the way, teaching the immunology of communicable diseases to medical and nursing students got distorted. Most physicians today don’t learn that the mortality of childhood diseases in well-nourished, unvaccinated, First-World children was negligible prior to the advent of vaccines. Nor do they understand the big difference between vaccine immunity and disease-acquired immunity. After recovery from measles or the flu or mumps or any other common viral illness, a person walks away with full-spectrum cellular and humoral immunity. The immune system is specifically and generally strengthened against a multitude of future diseases in ways we do not fully understand. Vaccine researchers concentrate on producing an antibody response, which is a very incomplete form of immunity. Even repeated doses of such vaccines do not produce the true macrophage-mediated tissue immunity that is lifelong and usually fully protective against repeat disease exposure.

Worse yet, in some cases, vaccine-based immunity can worsen disease outcomes. With SARS and other illnesses caused by RNA viruses, vaccination has increased the risk of dying from a subsequent exposure to the virus. This is the result of “immune enhancement,” wherein the vaccine-produced antibodies actually hide the virus particles from the host’s immune system killer cells. Rapid viral replication ensues causing fatal overwhelming disease. Cellular immunity from natural infection, on the other hand, is the kind of immunity that can save you from serious diseases like this novel coronavirus or the 1918 influenza.

Vaccination is not a panacea. It was once the last resort to the treatment of disease. In the age of huge vaccine profit it has become the first choice for every disease.

COVID-19 and the War against Hydroxychloroquine

This begins to explain the uproar about HCQ.

Never have I seen such political brawling over a legal pharmaceutical. When the current pandemic was starting to kill Americans in significant numbers, President Trump identified HCQ and azithromycin as having excellent cure potential. Around the world, doctors were speaking and writing about the great cure rate of COVID when these drugs were given early. Sick patients from all over the world recounted having nearly immediate turn-around of the symptoms once they were started on the regimen.

To my knowledge, neither governors nor boards of pharmacy have ever outlawed any legal drug—not even opioids like Oxycontin that cause about 30,000 deaths a year. But when it comes to HCQ and CQ, governors, medical boards, and boards of pharmacy in most states have either outlawed or limited the use of HCQ or threatened doctors with licensing board scrutiny. Medical leaders from the CDC and National Institutes of Health (NIH) said HCQ might not work and proclaimed that we needed more study—ignoring the multiple scientific and position papers being published daily that demonstrate the benefit of HCQ.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, an immunologist and head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease (NIAID) of the NIH, has discouraged use of HCQ for COVID-19, but praised Middle East respiratory syndrome (MERS) treatment with HCQ in 2013. In 2006 the CDC’s own research showed CQ to work against coronavirus in SARS-CoV-1, yet their current guidelines recommend against “high-dose use,” and does not discuss the low-dose regimens in use around the world. Note also that on Apr 28, 2020, Dr. Fauci touted the positive findings for remdesivir, even though no randomized controlled studies have been completed. Why is he so strongly promoting the $3,600 remdesivir and almost totally ignoring the $20 HCQ regimen, other than to say the latter is of “unproven benefit”?

Media acted in lockstep with corrupt politicians. They said HCQ was experimental. Not so—it has been around for decades, and approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Then, they claimed it was illegal for doctors to use HCQ off label. Wrong again. Nearly every doctor, every day, uses a drug “off label,” because, once FDA approved, drugs are not re-studied to add every potential benefit. And now scientific literature “hit pieces” against antimalarial drugs are being published and quoted. A recent Los Angeles Times headline, “Malaria drugs fail to help in coronavirus studies,” sensationalized a misleading study. This study, done in Brazil, prescribed toxic, even lethal doses to very sick patients late in the disease when it was almost certain to be of no benefit. The methodology was severely criticized by Brazilian scientists, and alleged ethical violations are under investigation by Brazilian authorities.

Since CQ and HCQ work by stopping viral replication, they can prevent viral damage to the heart, lungs, and other organs. However, they cannot improve organ damage that has occurred. While the Brazilian paper correctly reported that CQ did not change outcomes, this was a classic study designed to fail.

Since the 1950s, HCQ has been used for a variety of problems. HCQ seems to reduce the incidence of cardiovascular diseases in rheumatic patients. Millions have been treated with HCQ for malaria, and it is commonly given in long-term high-dose treatment of patients with rheumatologic disorders. Until now, the drug has been distributed with only a minor mention of the potential for cardiac arrhythmia. While other side effects are categorized as “very common,” “common,” or “rare,” cardiac issues are infrequent enough to be noted under “unknown frequency.” The Sanofi patient safety handout for Plaquenil (HCQ) states, “Heart problems or failure, cardiomyopathy, an enlarged or weak heart can occur if you take Plaquenil for long periods of time...” People with SARS-CoV-2 generally require only 5–14 days of treatment. So, why did the FDA only now issue a very public warning against the use of HCQ—citing cardiac rhythm issues?

Is There a Political Cover-up?

In the investigation of any political cover up, the question “Who knew what, when?” must be asked.

See, ‘Treatments’ p. 7

Treatments Available, But Suppressed

Reference papers discussing CQ/HCQ and viruses, from all over the world, go back at least to 1982. And there was much interest dating even into the 1970s about lysomotropic agents, i.e. chemicals that are selectively taken up into the lysosomes—the cellular organelle in which HCQ inhibits viral replication.

Speculating about the possible motives for hiding such a powerful weapon against viral illness during this pandemic, some might suggest a “deep state” take-down of America. Or one could focus on conflicts of interest, suggesting that lead spokesman Dr. Fauci is an integral part of a vaccine coalition.

Specifically, the Global Vaccine Action Plan (GVAP) is a collaboration of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and Dr. Fauci’s NIAID. Dr. Fauci was also named to the Leadership Council of the “Decade of Vaccines” Council. Although it is difficult to pin down all the financial details, we know that large sums of money are flowing from the Gates Foundation to and around NIAID projects, such as the 2019 partnership for “gene- based therapies against AIDS and Sickel Cell Disease, to which Gates contributed $100 million. Also, the Gates Foundation has contributed $2.24 Billion to the “Global Fund,” of which Dr. Deborah Birx, frequently at the White House panel discussing COVID-19 policy, is a board member.

The recent congressional bill H.R. 6074 in the 116th Congress to develop drugs and vaccines for coronavirus is a $3.1 billion windfall for drug companies, and also includes $8.36 million to Dr. Fauci’s NIAID for “training.” Moderna— one of the Gates-funded companies that is working on a coronavirus vaccine, is in partnership with NIAID and getting special treatment. Moderna was allowed to bypass standard long-term animal drug testing, and roll out mRNA-1273 vaccine trials on humans on Feb 24 at the NIH, within months of the genetic decoding of the virus. Moderna’s chief medical adviser, Tal Zaks, states, “I don’t think proving this in an animal model is on the critical path to getting this to a clinical trial.” And on May 2020, after NIH fast tracked Moderna’s vaccine human trials, Tal Zaks exercised stock options, selling 125,044 units of MRNA stock for $1,526,787.

None of this, however, explains the 40 years of medical misinformation and suppression of the pharmaceutical truth. To have covered up the knowledge for four decades that viruses could potentially be treated by antimicrobials required extensive effort:

- Censorship. It is likely that some scientists were never published again after authoring one paper on the anti- viral benefits of CQ.
- Buying silence of news media. This is evident from the blackout across the political news spectrum concerning vaccine adverse effects. Pharmaceutical manufacturers provide the most lucrative advertising for both written and broadcast news programs.
- Misdirection. For years, pharmacology professors in medical schools have perpetuated lies of omission.
- Lies by drug companies. Merck was caught publishing its own “peer reviewed” journal to promote its drugs.
- Regulatory capture. “Big Pharma” essentially owns the FDA by being its biggest funder and employing more than 58 percent of the FDA’s upper-level regulators and administrators either before or after their tenure.
- Research funding. Big Pharma is the major funder of nearly all “independent” drug research, and there is no incentive to research cheap/ less profitable solutions.

Implications

The COVID-19 pandemic is calling attention to the potential for treating viral diseases with currently available drugs, and exposing long-available but ignored research. The implications of all this are very disturbing. Where have the virologists been, and the CDC “experts” who claim to care about influenza deaths? Has the burgeoning nearly trillion- dollar vaccine industry been built at the expense of patients’ lives? Disregarding the sizeable database of vaccine injuries, and the controversy about the long-term danger of vaccines to the immune system, if HCQ or other drugs could have treated viral illnesses cheaply and effectively, there was never a need for vaccines to begin with. As the WHO reportedly admitted, as recorded in a currently unavailable YouTube video from 2019 Vaccine Safety Summit, the “front line is becoming wobbly”— meaning doctors are less and less convinced that vaccines are safe and desirable.

Boris Yeltsin, as he was surrounded by Soviet troops on the steps of Moscow’s Dom Pravitelstva Rossii Federatsii (the Russian White House), opined, “You can sit on a throne of bayonets, but you cannot sit on it for long.” It took 70 years for the truth about the murderous and corrupt Soviet regime to break through the propaganda, but when the masses of people understood, they tore down the Berlin wall. The wall of silence and coercion that has propped up a corrupt, and yes murderous, vaccine industry will hopefully now be dismantled by everyday physicians and patients who have awakened to the “biggest lie,” and are beginning to say, “Yes, Virginia, antibiotics and other antimicrobials do treat viruses.”

(HUGS) The Importance Of Physical Contact

By Rebecca Floris

In times of lockdowns, masks, and social distancing, it is easy to forget the primary language of humanity is physical touch. Physical touch – hugs, kisses, massage, holding hands, sexual intercourse, massage, and any other skin-to-skin contact between humans – has significant physical, mental, and emotional benefits on the human body. Physical touch has been proven to stimulate immune response, ward off infection, lower blood pressure, decrease feelings of loneliness, anxiety and depression, and increase feelings of compassion, trust and safety. The lack of physical touch is known to have a profound, negative psychological impact on the body. “Touch is our first language and one of our core needs. The touch of a safe, trusted loved one can alleviate anxiety and promote a sense of well-being without doing anything else”, stated Dr. Jon Reeves, a clinical psychologist in Seattle, Washington.

Massage therapy, the manipulation of the body’s soft tissue, is known to reduce stress, and have a positive effect on immune response. “We found massage actually increases natural killer cells. Natural killer cells are the front lines of the immune system. They kill viral cells, bacteria cells,” stated Tiffany Field, PhD. Director of the Touch Research Institute at the University of Miami, Miller School of Medicine, in Miami, Florida.

Natural killer cells (known as NK cells) or large granular lymphocytes (LGL) are critical to the immune system in the human body because they help to form antigen-specific immunological memory fundamental in the response of secondary infections with the same antigen. Cortisol, a stress hormone, kills NK cells but studies have shown massage therapy directly benefits natural killer cells and strengthens the immune system. “We think the reason that happens is because we’re knocking down cortisol levels, the body’s culprit stress hormone. Cortisol kills natural killer cells, and so if we can reduce the stress hormones, we can save natural killer cells,” stated Field. Physical touch is known to improve mental health, reduce conflict with others, as well it decreases anxiety and depression.

“We know people experiencing ongoing conflicts with others are less able to fight off cold viruses. We also know people who report having social support are partly protected from the effects of stress on psychological states, such as depression and anxiety,” stated Sheldon Cohen, a psychology professor at the Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Cohen and his team published study results in the Psychological Science Journal in 2015 concluding greater perceived support and more-frequent hugs in study subjects predicted less-severe illness signs after they were exposed to a common cold virus.

“We tested whether perceptions of social support are equally effective in protecting us from stress-induced susceptibility to infection and also whether receiving hugs might partially account for those feelings of support and themselves protect a person against infection. Either way, those who receive more hugs are somewhat more protected from infection,” stated Cohen.

Physical touch can be attributed to increased feelings of compassion, trust and safety related to the release of oxytocin, a hormone commonly referred to as the love hormone. Oxytocin release has been linked to maternal behaviour, lactation and social bonding in humans.

Paul Zak, a professor of economics at the Claremont Graduate University in Claremont, California, has studied the relationship between oxytocin release and trust between humans. His studies have determined when someone demonstrates trust towards another person, the body releases traces of oxytocin in what he called “a fleeting signature of safety and care.” This results in a higher oxytocin level and creates a feedback loop where the brain is motivated to be more trustworthy. “It’s a beautiful kind of system,” he stated. His research has shown oxytocin release can happen during massage, eye contact, watching emotional films on television, and even when one is posting on social media.

Unfortunately, lockdowns, masks, and social distancing recommendations by public health officials around the world have created a severe touch deprivation problem within human society. Online communication may have increased, but it is not an adequate substitute for skin-to-skin touch. “I think social media has been really detrimental to touch. Being on your phone is distancing people physically from each other. It used to be in airports, you’d see people hugging and napping on each other. Now, they’re just not touching,” stated Fields.

The lack of human touch is contributing directly to increased blood pressure, heart disease, decreased immune response and increased levels of anxiety and depression in all demographics. Stimulation of the skin through touch, massage therapy, or exercise is essential to wellbeing and health.

Dear Sensitive Ones: We Need you at your Highest Vibration Possible

By Krissy VanAlstyne

Dear empathic hearts, sensitive souls and all the healers who walk this earth—your time has never been more now: we need you at your most. We need you taking care of yourself, wholly. We need you in tune with the gifts that you are, fully. We need you ensuring that you are not suffering in vain. We need you at your highest vibration possible, not weighted down by muck that is not yours to carry.

We, the sensitive beings, are the healing tools of incredible importance. The ones who have seen our own darkest shadows through to the light, releasing the muck that once lived in us—realizing in doing so, that the suffering that we were born into was actually for great purpose. None of our suffering was ever in vain.

We were born for extraordinary purpose, my loves. I hope that you know that and let no one stand in the way of the power of your sensitivities—including yourself. For you are the needed medicine in a really sick world right now. We, the sensitive, are the very cure. These words are for the ones who have consciously chosen to accept this work as their own. The work of a feeler. The work of a healer. The work of the divine instruments that we are.

Thank you, for I know this work is for the bravest of the brave. To work with, and through the divine, as the light and healing bodies that we are, is not something we are taught, but is something that we teach ourselves by learning to trust an inner knowing that has us moving toward a known unknown, constantly. That, in itself, is brave—let alone the feelings and emotions we feel to and need to heal along the way in doing so. But in doing so, we are ensuring that no suffering has ever existed in vain. Oh no, we suffer to end suffering—a complexity only understood by those doing this soul work, via the human body as we do. If you are reading this, are innately sensitive, and have yet to claim your gift and your purpose here as the feeler-healer that you are, then this is for you too. Maybe even especially for you.

Welcome home, dear precious Earth angels. We understand you even as you still learn to understand yourself. We are a special kind of tribe this way. You are not alone, even when the world we live in can make us feel so. It is all a part of the plan, really, to help you—and us all—evolve. And what an evolution it is.

We, the sensitive healers of this world, have been evolving and transcending the suffering, transmuting dark to light. This is happening whether we have accepted or understood our valuable role here or not, because in every emotion that we feel, we are moving the dark into the light and affecting something greater that we cannot fully see. Many of us know and therefore do see, just not in a way we are accustomed to, as we transition through our consciousness. Sometimes, we are forced into our roles as the healers that we are; a hard shove that dropped us to our knees, leaving us no other choice but to start the journey of our own healing. It's do or die—continue to suffer in vain or learn to suffer for purpose. Then we start to really see.

So go willingly or go with a bit of force—either way, it is serving to clear the muck from the collective consciousness, however it unfolds. Whichever way it's meant to go, it will surely go, and as it goes, we learn the pain becomes something to embrace, not something to avoid. We learn that the painful dark within is the gateway for our human experience to dissolve its no-longer-needed shadowy bits. We learn that suffering is short-term when we choose to meet this truth heart-on. So we face it—over and over again. We feel it through—over and over again. Until it resolves.

We, the sensitive, pulled our once-stolen-from-us power back to us, and it became a strength that proved unstoppable. For once, we are no longer afraid to feel that which so many others run from; there isn't anything that we cannot face and move through. We've been through the depressions, the crippling anxiety, and the pain that stole our breath, dropped us to our knees, and had us fighting for our lives as we moved through the darkest night of the soul. For some of us, more than once.

Pain is no stranger to us. We know how to burn with purpose and how to rise up from the ashes, again and again. We are strength with a whole new meaning. Our version of strong isn't found in muscle—it's found in feeling. We are the trailblazers anchoring in the heart-centered consciousness, helping to usher in a new world where so many souls are looking to come home to heal too. This is where I invite us all to be most aware, dear ones, to seize the opportunity to stay at our most. Most bright. Most strong. Most embodied and whole. And most potent as a result, as the medicine that you are. Because you see, in my experience, there will be many who are also walking through their dark, looking to heal and to come home but end up coming to us instead.

Just remember, though, home for them isn't through or in ours. It's through and in them. We are healers, but we are not here to heal anyone but self. Those who have yet to really face their pain inside the darkness and feel it through to healing can show up causing painful chaos in our space as they search for the love they need to find within them—within us. We cannot love someone to their light. We cannot heal someone home. Try as we might to stick by them as they pit stop on their way, we will soon go down with a sinking ship, suffering through dark waters that we don't need to swim, even though we can.

Moncton Protestors Terrorized By Police

By Lise Doucet

Every Sunday since early September, a dedicated group of people stand in front of city hall in Moncton, New Brunswick to share information, march and speak up for the freedoms that we hold dear and define us as a country. We also speak up against the exaggerated measures taken to deal with COVID and the current situation of the world.

At first, our main goal was the kids and getting them to be in school without fear, without masks and without being separated from one another. But, as time went by the measures in place “for our safety” only increased and we saw tyranny settle in and get comfortable here in Canada. Our precious elders were isolated, and many died alone not understanding why everyone disappeared and why their children abandoned them.

No matter how much we spoke up, no matter how many horror stories came out of increased deaths by suicide, depression, domestic violence, increased substance abuse, unemployment, burnout, business shutting down, people filing for bankruptcy, (unfortunately the list goes on), the measures got tighter, the rules increased without any mention from the government to address those issues. Fear and confusion have taken over for most people, some due to the measures in place, some are afraid of the virus, some are just afraid of breaking rules and getting in trouble.

At every rally, there was always a police presence, and we always felt respected and supported. The week before the January 24 rally, quite randomly and radically, warnings were issued by the municipal and the provincial news, along with the RCMP that they would crack down and handle “THE MONCTON GROUP.” Well, they kept their promise as there were more police officers on site that day than there were peaceful protesters on that day. Fines were given and arrests were made in a very brutal manner.

Here is the story of a few who suffered at the hands of police officers, men and women who have forgotten their oath and are simply following orders without question. First, we have Britney Green, Nick DeAngelis and Dave Wess.

On January 24, while others were fined and given the opportunity to identify themselves, Nick, Dave and Britney were almost immediately arrested and taken to jail where they were kept in solitary confinement for four days! Here they had no idea how long they would be kept, what their charges were and when they would be tried. They quickly lost track of time. They could not talk with each other and were kept in different facilities. Nick thinks they were targeted because they had been distributing information packages about the harm caused by lockdowns and other measures taken due to the COVID situation, the inaccuracy of the PCR tests, the health damages due to prolonged mask wearing, the efficiency/inefficacy of mask wearing studies, and censorship. They were punished harshly and still haven't stepped into a courtroom to defend themselves against these fraud-

When this stuff arrives in our life, looking to be healed, to be exposed, to be loved, as it looks to return home, may we be wise enough to know exactly what needs to be done, when it does. It's danger—danger, I say. So step back, and send this energy back to its owner. It's the only place that it can be fully transmuted and healed. The pain we feel, as these sensitive beings that we are, can sometimes come from being too close and getting entangled in another person's dark that isn't ours to feel or heal or suffer in. It's theirs to feel, to heal, to suffer through until it transmutes, so make sure to send it back. We are healers, the light, the medicine of love in human form—but we are not the healer for anyone's darkness but our own. Others need to rise up to do their work, just as we did—so send it back.

Be wise, dear sensitive soul. Untangle yourself from all that is not yours to burden. We need to set what is not ours free. We set ourselves free too, and when we do, to be at our most, we most definitely need to feel free. Remember, we work for the light by finding our way through our own dark, not through the dark of anyone else's.

ulent charges. The crown wanted to hold them in jail even longer but thankfully the judge released them saying there was not enough evidence to keep them. To add insult to injury, the police took Nick's phone and he still has not gotten it back.

Then we have Jon Rossiter; now this man knows his laws and rights and reminds us all that: “A public health mandate is not a law and it does not override the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. A provincial health mandate can never and will never supersede the nation's laws in our Canadian Charter. Everything the officers did on this day was in violation of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms! Every action taken was illegal. Not only that, but to invoke an emergency act, there first needs to BE AN EMERGENCY. There is none. This can easily be legally and scientifically proven. I did not break a single “mandate”, even by their own standards.”

“I'd also like to point out that no officer has any legal right to arrest someone for breaking the emergency act. Can you explain to me why some people were only handed a ticket while others were arrested AND ticketed for the exact same act? It's pathetic.” Adds Jon.

The story goes on with one retired nurse whom police officers tried to arrest, but she beautifully and strongly stated her rights as these men tried to force her arms behind her back in order to handcuff her. She stood strong and one police officer recognized her from his church and asked that she be left alone.

A 50 year old woman was also tackled to the ground by four police officers before being arrested. She is still quite shaken up.

Many others were fined with all kinds of reasons including public nuisance, gathering or not wearing a mask even though the imposed distancing was observed. Since then, people still gather to protest and march, and police are still vigilant.

No Mask, No Voice! Canadian Nurse Speaks Up To Protect Our Children

By Kristen Nagel

One year ago, we gathered for birthdays, traveled freely, and sent our kids to school without hesitation. We entered stores, smiling at other customers without fear or judgment. We grieved with family and friends at funerals; we laughed and celebrated with them at weddings. We visited friends when they had babies and enjoyed birthday parties for our kids and those we loved. What has been taken from us in such a short period of time is unimaginable. What we have allowed to be taken is our responsibility to amend.

If complying and being patient worked, we would have our freedom back already. When we were promised only two weeks to flatten the curve, as Canadians, so many believed it and gave their trust. Because that is what Canadians do, we believe in and hope for the best and we don't assume that we are being violated by pharmaceutical companies and the government. This trust has been betrayed. Today, we are in the eleventh month of this monumental erosion of our long term freedoms.

I can stand here and tell you about the flawed PCR tests and empty hospitals, that the case numbers are meaningless, and that the government has never cared about your health; but today is about empowerment, today is about realizing our true power and potential without waiting for someone to come and save us. It is now time for us to redefine what it means to be a Canadian and take bold action to save the future of our country.

My name is Kristen Nagle. I am a nurse and holistic nutritionist, but I am a mother first. I cannot stand idly by while this abuse is happening to our country and our children: the next generation of Canadians. They are trying to silence our voices and the voices of our children.

No Mask! No Voice! Is the message being taught to our children in schools. They are told to eat their lunch in silence. Dehumanization is starting at birth as parents are told to wear masks during labor and when in contact with their own baby. Mothers are told to wash their skin prior to breastfeeding. What message does this send? We are dirty? Our own children can be harmed by our touch? When a baby is born, now they only see their masked mother's face.

The still face experiment has proven the devastating psychological damages this has on babies. Without seeing facial expressions they are distraught, emotional, and fearful. They are scared of the very people that are meant to keep them safe, secure, and loved. We will not stand for this. Our children will not be silenced. We will not be silenced.

They can take our jobs and try to take away our professional licences but they cannot take the truth. That is what unites us, that is what continues to give us strength to rise up and resist. We have lost connection with ourselves, each other and the divine, God. Even the masks we are told to wear stop the very essence that keeps us alive and connected: breath.

We have been made into victims and disempowered. Taught from birth that our bodies are weak and that we need pharmaceutical injections to keep us strong. We've been told to ignore our intuition and our gut instincts. We have been taught to rely on someone else for the care of our health. We have been taught to fear our own bodies, our neighbours, and even the air we breathe.

True health and well-being are not found by someone else or in an injection, or even behind a mask. They are found from within us. You are the only person responsible for you. Nobody else is responsible for your health. It is yours and you must claim it and protect it.

This is the tipping point. It only takes 25% of a committed few that can influence the many and sweep away social conventions. A 25% minority is what is needed to change the status quo and succeed. We can do this by being relentless, by committing to new behaviours, by repeatedly demonstrating that new behaviour until others start to copy it.

All governments get their authority from the people and we have the power to be sovereign beings. Under our Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, we do not need the government's permission, we need our own permission. The government is meant to be our public servant. They are not here to look out for us or have our best interest in mind. If they did, they wouldn't be censoring those teaching about true health, vitamin D, vitamin C, Zinc, nature, mindset, movement, real food touched by an unobstructed sun, and the importance of commitment and connection. They are not above us, nobody is above us. We create our reality, we create our rules, we create our future. It is time to come together to take back control. The new way forward will require us to build in person networks, prepare our families and our communities, to live sustainably and connected to the earth, to make brave choices, and to learn to be independent, sovereign beings.

We each have a responsibility to define a new way of living as Canadians, a better way. We are going back to the foundations of hard work, a strong in-person network, self sustainability, and resourcefulness. These challenges will not be easy and will come with great hardship. Things need to crumble and fall apart before we can create something new. I, for one, am excited for this process knowing the beauty of what we are capable of creating when we come together and stand united.

Never underestimate the significance of one person standing up for freedom and the ripple effects of your bravery. This is the time to stand up and be bold. To envision the future YOU want.

The War On Faith Continues

By Tim Himes

The war on faith has reached new heights with the incarceration of a pastor in Edmonton. On February 17, 2021 pastor James Coates, of GraceLife Church, was led off in handcuffs and ankle restraints, for 2 charges in violation of public health orders. He is being held at the Edmonton Remand Centre, a high security prison. To add insult to injury, pastor Coates is required to endure 2 weeks in isolation, as per covid protocol. This excludes visitation by anyone, including his own wife.

Anyone familiar with solitary confinement knows this is cruel punishment, and considered a form of torture. All of this occurred because he wanted to serve God and his congregation, and hold a church service. In Canada, a country founded on the freedom of religion, which is the first freedom listed on our Charter of Rights. Something is very wrong, folks.

Starting with the unlawful health orders, which the government has failed to demonstrably prove are a reasonable and appropriate response for the circumstances at hand, as required by the Charter of Rights. So now they've imprisoned a minister, one who was in fact defending the Charter. Does the rule of law still mean something in this country? Because these lockdown restrictions are unlawful. They must be lifted before the destruction of our society is complete. Freedom of Religion is Essential!

It's worth noting, that on the same day Feb 17, the chief justice of BC's Supreme Court denied an application from the province for an injunction against three Fraser Valley churches who were in violation of lockdown rules, prohibiting in-person services. A small victory, yet the rules remain in place. Elsewhere, churches in Manitoba and Ontario that remained open for the past year have been enduring numerous fines and threats.

Meanwhile, at the Edmonton Remand Centre, several hundred people have gathered outside, to hold daily vigil in support of the imprisoned preacher. Several ministers are in attendance, and have spoken passionately from the stage; including pastor Tobias Tissen from Manitoba; and from Ontario pastor Rene McIntyre and pastor Henry Hildebrandt. As well, the wife of pastor Coates addressed the crowd, pleading for compassion in the face of oppression.

Of course, the mainstream media offers minimal coverage of the situation, again trying to spin the story, referring to the supporters as anti-maskers or white supremacists. But they're rapidly losing credibility, so they're welcome to say what they like.

I'm personally quite shocked and disgusted with these recent developments in our country. Although it was inspiring to see the loyal support for pastor Coates outside the prison, the question was asked from the stage, where are the other pastors? Why isn't every clergyman/woman in Alberta standing in support of their peer? For that matter, why not every minister in the country? All faith leaders? This is your fight too. When do you plan to open your churches, synagogues, mosques and temples? One more year, maybe two? Are you really concerned about your flock? What do you even stand for? It seems you hold the unlawful rules of man in greater reverence than your own faith. Now is the time to make a decision, if you care to be relevant in the new world.

All faith leaders can in fact be an integral part of the solution, the fail-safe mechanism that turns things around, and restores sanity in our society! You hold that power... open the churches! This is truly a historical moment. I pray the ministers find their collective voice, and denounce the evil creeping into Canada.

I hope the public can clearly see how off-course we are now. We're holding a preacher in a high security prison for holding worship service! Anyone can see this isn't right. Where is the public outrage? When do you say enough is enough?

One Truth Will Save Our World. A Truth Who’s Time Has Come

By Christopher James

This may be the most important communication you will ever read, for every man and woman reading these words will be given what has always been hidden from the depths of your heart, mind and soul, in order for you to be truly free and independent. Our consciousness worldwide is under massive attack and on such a scale that without this truth, we will see all we love and hold so dear in this world destroyed, which includes God’s creation (man).

This is not some game or some conspiracy theory, these are concrete facts that the people of this world were never given. The spirit of our fellow man knew something was very wrong and today, for the first time for many of you reading this, you will be given the truth which was hidden by design. You will be providing the light and way forward honourably, lawfully and powerfully to fight the evil we all see occurring on a massive scale.

Right now people worldwide are under attack regardless of race, colour and religion because foundational knowledge has been kept hidden, but no more. With this truth, we can take down the evil that is using a global lie (this pandemic), as the point of its spear. “When truth is present, very few words are required.” So I will keep this simple for my fellow man to understand... everything we hold dear will be destroyed if “we the people”, do not WAKE UP and act now!

I have spent 20 years preparing for this moment in order to ensure others may find the courage and strength to awaken and see the way forward. I speak now especially to my fellow men and women in the military, law enforcement and frontline responders: we have never needed all of you awake more than we do now. You took an oath to protect and serve your fellow man and woman, and this is your moment in history. A small window exists to awaken and realize professionally that you all have been lied to. That alone should give you the internal strength to face this ignorance and evil that has compromised your oaths and much more.

Now we the people see who the enemy is, and ignorance is the first one. No longer can it be the foundation to manipulate your heart, mind and soul at this crucial time. Here and now is where it ends. The required worldwide response must be executed to the fullest extent, for this evil will not go down without a fight. This moment before us is of biblical proportions. However, before we can run we must learn to walk and not put the “cart before the horse”.

The first truth that is hidden: LEGAL applies only to that which is incorporated. The term “LAWFUL” applies to that which is unincorporated, meaning a man or woman or people as born. Person[s] is a trick word; we are not born a legal person and this has been fooled into the consciousness of man.

Now this requires us all to first understand that when we are born in hospital, while lying in a crib, your mother and father are filling out paperwork. The staff are not aware of what is being done or created either, which is a horrific trespass of an “unlawful conversion” (a legal person is created.) When we are born we have no knowledge of this act and have given no consent to what is being done. The evidence of this trespass is the “BIRTH CERTIFICATE”, which your parents received and gave to you when older, which we foolishly use as ID when buying a home, land, car, (property). There is so much we are not told, please learn more online at www.awarriorcalls.com/home for foundational knowledge videos.

The law this country was founded on, comes to us from our creator. It is common law: the unwritten law between man as we walk this earth with unalienable rights. We are born free and we are all equal under the law given by God, our creator. Only a contract or consent establishes a law between a man or woman, period; otherwise no man or woman can trespass, cause wrong or harm. This law is very simple; 1) We can’t claim a man or woman as property, without consent or contract 2) We can’t administrate a man or woman as property, without consent or contract and 3) We can’t administrate property without right, without consent or contract to the core because this knowledge is being hidden. They are operating under massive constructive fraud by a private society (BAR), whose courts are inferior to the Supremacy of God, the law of this land. We the people did NOT create a legal person, nor did we consent to it. So who did? Well it’s the Queen, the Central Bankers and Pope who created these corrupt service corporations worldwide that masquerade as our “Governments” (ONTARIO, CANADA etc.)

In addition, our public courthouses are corrupt

We have corrupt people (employees) at the top of these service corporations worldwide ordering us to wear masks, shut businesses down, face massive fines (extortion), or threaten us with jail (kidnapping), and soon the ultimate... forced vaccinations. Only common law can stop this evil from continuing. Our verbal consent or a contract must exist (which it does not) for people (employees), acting for a service corporation (Trudeau, Doug Ford etc.), to administer property without right.

I began months ago to expose this massive corruption, powerfully, worldwide. This has been executed with the ‘Sekulovski Court’ in Milton, Ontario established September 12, 2020 which is now under massive attack by multiple BAR members (judges/lawyers). They cannot allow this truth to be known or that they produced no verifiable evidence to which the BAR relies on for control. THE RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE DO NOT APPLY to a man or woman (people).

For over 100 years these “rules” created by people from a private society which we have no contract with nor given any consent to, are used to block us from accessing our public courthouses correctly under common law, and we are forced into a LEGAL jurisdiction without right.

I also established “Parhar Court” in BC on November 13, 2020, which is under attack by BAR members using the same corruption. In that province it is called “Supreme Court Civil Rules” and again, not one BAR member has produced the required evidence.

A maxim in law: “Ignorance of the law is no excuse”. BAR members are in trouble and they know it. Further the people acting as “Judge/Justices” are public servants and as such, have no jurisdiction over any man or woman, as their oath is to protect the property of man. Instead it is their society they protect.

We the people now have the evidence that this private society has been causing enormous wrong and harm for decades. We are being lied to now on another colossal level (Covid 19/Pandemic) where the elderly are being terrorized & murdered right before our eyes, because truth is being blocked. Thousands of doctors are trying to stop these lies which are destroying our world. Genocide is occurring from the “covid lie” and the police must wake up. These truths must get to the masses so all frontline responders and the public can come together, shoulder to shoulder, and enter our public courthouses to restore common law while removing this BAR control.

My live streams began August 6th 2020 and now every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday @ 8pm have collectively exposed massive truth and corruption. Together will stop this evil and be a light to this world, right now. We so desperately need to see the way forward, simply and powerfully, saving mankind lawfully, peacefully and with love.

Rich Got An Incredible $1.9 Trillion Richer In 2020 While Everyone Else Lost Out

By Darren Smith

While the majority of people have seen their wealth and income shrink considerably during 2020 the richest people and corporations have enjoyed a record increase in wealth over the last 12 months.

According to a report by Forbes magazine, the roughly 2,200 billionaires on earth are now 20% richer, bringing their combined total value to $11,400,000,000,000.

Despite the suicidal economic policies of governments across the world to shut down, decimating their own populations and tax bases leading to the estimated permanent closure of more than 50% of businesses, the rich get richer.

The continuing push to move most economic, social and political life to the internet and towards a “sustainable future” means companies like Amazon, Tesla, Microsoft, Zoom and Google’s owner Alphabet have seen their stock market prices skyrocket, since the short crash of March 22, 2020.

Elon Musk alone saw his fortune grow by a GDP beating $110 billion from $27 billion in 2019, making his company the most valuable automaker in the world, despite not even being in the top 10 when it comes to cars sold by volume.

The near-state sponsored boost of Amazon’s value has kept Jeff Bezos the richest of the business Olympians, rising $67.5 billion to $182 billion.

Meanwhile around the world, unemployment rates continue to rise, stimulus and furlough payments are dwindling and winding down, savings have been all but used up but the bills continue to arrive and the debt mountain piles up.

Someone is going to have to pay for all of this madness and overreaction, for the insane attack on our own economies and the further deep red-dening of the budgets. It is highly unlikely to be those who have managed to thrive so well and keep expanding their empires; those who are so adept at avoiding tax and the invisible universal tax, price inflation.

Beginner’s Guide To Understanding “The Great Reset”

By Ryan Craswell

The Great Reset went from a fringe discussion to mainstream news in just a matter of weeks.

The plan, which has been around for years, was previously dismissed by the masses as a conspiracy theory. Too wild and crazy to possibly be true. This reset was nothing more than a bad sci-fi movie plot, it couldn’t possibly happen in real life. Suddenly though, it’s not so easy to brush off the topic. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and other Canadian politicians are openly talking about the reset, as is the Royal family and plenty of other influential people around the world. It’s all out in public view.

So, what is The Great Reset? Simply put, it’s a massive restructuring of our society and life as we currently know it. I’ve put together a quick, easy-to-digest breakdown so beginners can begin to grasp what’s happening around them. I’ll follow up with more detailed content on the various aspects of the plan in the coming weeks so be sure to subscribe to the newsletter (FreeNorth.news)so you don’t miss out.

1) What’s in a Name?

This is one of the most easy ways to get thrown off when starting your research. The Great Reset is commonly known and referenced by a number of names. Agenda 21; Agenda 2030; Globalism; New World Order; or the Fourth Industrial Revolution. You might hear the reset referenced by any of these names. At the end of the day, the goals are all the same.

2) Who’s calling the shots?

The rich and powerful that make up the world’s elite is the easy answer. There are a few debates about who exactly is at the top of the pyramid. The British Monarchs and big banking dynasties are cornerstones with the Rothchild and Rockefeller families among the most famous names at the top of the banking list.

These rich and powerful families call the shots through their Think Tank groups that influence so many of the policies our governments follow. The United Nations & W.H.O., Council on Foreign Relations, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, Trilateral Commission, the Club of Rome, and the Bilderberg Group to name a few.

These groups shape so many of the policies for our governments despite the fact they were never elected, making it easy to see who is in charge and why our local governments so often make decisions that don’t benefit the people they were elected to represent.

3) The Main Goal: The New World Order

The main goal of the Great Reset is the abolishment of nations and creation of a one-world government, aka: New World Order. George H.W. Bush referenced the New World Order multiple times. Joe Biden says there is a task to create a “New World Order”. The creation of a one-world government isn’t that outrageous if you notice that they’ve been incrementally pushing forward with this plan for years. Disguised under trade deals like NAFTA (North American Free Trade Agreement), the European Union for regional economic trade. Using the United Nations for global influence and dictating policies of nations... and plenty more. Just look at how large the United Nations has become.

The UN is on the brink of becoming a world government. They’ve got all the pieces in place, they just need the Western Nations to collapse. And they’ve been working with China to subvert Canada, the USA, UK and the West for years. Now, compare the UN goals with policies the Trudeau government keeps bringing in: gun bans, carbon taxes, war on fossil fuels, mass immigration. It’s all United Nations’ goals.

Everyone who says Trudeau is an idiot because his policies are hurting Canada needs to understand his priority is not Canada. His loyalty lies with the United Nations and UN Agenda 2030 – aka The Great Reset. He says it himself and even admitted it during his recent carbon tax hike.

4) Restructuring of Society

A complete restructuring of society under the New World Order is inevitable if they are able to fully achieve their one-world government. The most concerning plan is the depopulation agenda, which coincidentally appears to coincide with vaccines. For those that haven’t been paying attention, the vaccine czar Bill Gates is constantly preaching vaccines. At the same time as he’s preaching, he claims he’s doing a good job of vaccinating the public and can lower world population.

Bill Gates openly promoted population control. He said, “The population is rising to about 9 billion people & if we do a really great job using new vaccines, health care and reproductive health services, we could lower that number by perhaps 10-15%.” This should easily make you wonder about the rushed COVID-19 “vaccine” that Gates has been pushing and heed warnings of doctors advising it could potentially cause infertility issues in females.

Other NWO priorities include: elimination of private property and single-dwelling households, creation of smart, mega cities with surveillance systems powered by 5G, a cashless currency, Chinese style social credit scores, complete control of rural lands and livestock, end of fossil fuels, universal basic income and more.

If you look at that list it’s easy to see that the war on fossil fuels has been on-going for some time. The cashless society and universal basic income have become a priority over the past year, while 5G systems have been going up while everyone has been stuck at home. Surveillance systems and the social credit score model in China will be rolled out across the globe, while the big changes will come down the line. They know we adapt to incremental changes in our lifestyle but would reject a full onslaught overnight.

5) The Push Back

The good news is that resistance is forming to The Great Reset as awareness builds. While you were busy running your kids to the rink or binge-watching TV, the UN and other front groups operated in the shadows. The world is waking up to the global agenda and citizens are protesting – pretty much everywhere but Canada. However, more and more Canadians are fed up with Trudeau and his un-Canadian agenda every day. But many are still sleeping and don’t realize the end goal of his decision-making. It’s on you to share this information and spread the word, so we can get more people caring about the future of Canada.

An Open Letter To All Canadian Politicians

I am writing this open letter to you, our politicians, with hope that you will read it by mistake in this newspaper, as the ones that are sent to your workplace are left without answers.

The last time we, the people, heard from you was around election time when flyers about you were left around the neighbourhoods and the phones were full of your messages begging for our votes. Do you remember? Because we do.

You, the ones who begged for our votes, how much do you really care about us, the people, who put you in your political positions? How much do you really care about how much harm you can cause by overreaching in people’s lives?

I would like to remind you that we, the people, are adults who have the ability to make good decisions regarding our health and lifestyle and we are disappointed that you, our politicians, are treating us like children these days. Please remember that you asked for our votes, but are not reaching out to see what those people are doing after a long year of rules and regulations thrown weekly at us.

None of you missed any paychecks but we the people did. None of you had empty bank accounts and had to go to the food bank to feed your families, none of you lost your business, never able to reopen again. On the contrary you take vacations when we had orders to stay home.

Please do not tell us that we are in this together. When you go through what we, the people, are going through, then and only then, you can say that.

Please make a phone call to the ones you phone for the votes, and talk to them to hear if your decisions help them or hurt them. Please remember your job is to work for us not to hurt us. It’s because of us, the people, that you are in that position. Look deep in your soul and ask yourself: what are your values and morals? Before you decide what is good for us, the people, ask yourself how much do you really care about us, and if the role was reversed, how would you feel about it?

Please remember, when you vote in Parliament, have in mind your children’s future and your grandchildren’s future. Please remember above all, we the people, will remember your courage for standing for what is right because the future depends on what all of us do today.

A concerned person who had voted for you, and I will remember.

CTV Serves Slanderous Misinformation About Druthers

By Tea Lynn Moore

On Sunday, February 7, CTV National News aired the following segment: “In all the confusion surrounding COVID, we have a warning tonight about cold-hearted criminals preying on the vulnerable and using misinformation to steal their money. Now Ottawa is investing in counter-measures to expose the scams.”

The segment then goes on to show an Ottawa city councillor going door-to-door with a copy of Druthers newspaper in one hand (presumably to warn the residents), and a stack of paper of what the council man called “information from our medical professionals” in the other.

“I had a few people that are pretty concerned because it looks like a pretty legitimate piece of material” the councillor says – as the camera zooms in to the front page of Druthers, featuring the logo, and continues to show other pages from the January edition of Druthers. While the anchor warns that “scammers are looking to take advantage of the anxiety and fear felt by so many”.

The segment then ties Druthers to a phone scam, where scammers call asking for money in exchange for receiving a test or a vaccine faster. It then concludes by warning CTV listeners: “to protect yourself, experts recommend you be critical with the infor- mation you read or receive, and that means double checking it on a (mainstream) news or government website”.

So, it would appear that CTV news is fighting independent journalism and alternative information like Druthers by misleading their viewers into believing Druthers is scamming people.

Obviously, Druthers is not a scam. Clearly we do not and will never sell or promote vaccines. 100% of donations go directly to printing and distribution of the paper. This grassroots movement is Guerrilla style; once the skids are dropped off in major cities, across Canada, over 300 volunteers freely distribute them in their neighbourhoods. This paper is by the people and for the people.

CTV was right about one thing though: be critical of the information you read. That not only includes alternative sources of information, but it especially includes mainstream news as well as information given to us by the government. We live in a world where billionaires and special interest groups fund our politicians, our media, our “experts” and even the so-called “fact-checkers”. It’s time we speak up and call them out.

We invite you to help defend Druthers against these slanderous claims. Watch this video then see the description to learn how to file a complaint against CTV News @ www.druthers.net/CTV

Absurdity Observer

A List Of Some Of The Most Absurd Things That Have Happened In Recent Weeks!

- Journalist and creator of Druthers News, Shawn Jason, received an $880 fine while live-streaming an anti-lockdown protest in downtown Toronto during “stay-at-home orders” despite being alone and continuously walking (outdoor exercising is ‘allowed’). Numerous unjustified fines and arrests were given to the protesters that day and in the weeks prior.
- Quebec’s Executive Council revealed that the COVID-19 communications project has budgeted around $13 million per month for a COVID-19 awareness ad campaign.
- In a news release issued February 18th (a full year after COVID entered Canada), the Ontario government announced it is investing $2.5 million in wearable contact tracing technology that will alert users if they may have been exposed to COVID-19, AND will beep or vibrate if they are within six feet of another person.
- Pastor James Coates, of GraceLife Church near Edmonton, has become Canada’s first pastor to be jailed for holding indoor worship services.
- Mainstream media widely reported though-out the month of February on a study done by the CDC that concludes that 2 masks are better than 1. What the mainstream failed to mention is that this study was conducted on dummy heads!
- Facebook has barred the world from finding and sharing Australian news on its platform in a dramatic escalation of a fight with the Australian government over proposed publisher payment regulations.
- After the White House asked tech giants Facebook, Twitter, and Google to suppress vaccine “misinformation,” Facebook is now banning everything they deem as “anti-vaxx misinformation” across the world. Facebook will also start showing users in Canada less political content (content from “official sources” such as the government will be exempt).
- Europe’s oldest known person, 117-year-old Sister Andre, survives after testing positive for COVID-19. She experienced no symptoms during the course of her COVID-19 experience.
- After deploying 200 police officers, half a dozen manure producing riot horses, and police breaking into his property to change the locks, The City of Toronto has billed Adamson BBQ owner Adam Skelly $187,000 to cover the cost of enforcing lockdown regulations on the days he attempted to open his restaurant to the public.

- The Muppet Show is now deemed as “offensive content” by Disney+ and is now only viewable by adults.
- In New Brunswick, an 80-year old woman visiting her husband was kicked out of hospital for holding her husband’s hand. She was just supposed to sit in the chair by an X marked on the floor that was six feet away.
- In a shocking revelation, the FDA admitted they have yet to analyze any vaccine safety data from their monitoring system “BEST” and do not plan on analyzing the data until another 2+ months from now due to technical challenges in the development of their systems. The FDA has yet to officially approve any COVID-19 vaccine as they need to analyze safety data to do so. Until the data is analyzed, the COVID-19 vaccines are receiving a more limited approval called ‘Emergency Use Authorization.’
- A new vaccine shot by Moderna is now in the works to address the new vaccine-resistant South African variant. Once completed, people would then have to take 3 shots total to be fully vaccinated against Covid-19 (assuming more vaccines for vaccine resistant variants don’t pop up).
- A new report by the Ontario Financial Accountability Office indicates that Ontario saw the largest annual decline in employment on record last year. Ontario lost 355,300 jobs in 2020.
- While the restrictions are causing Canadians to lose their jobs and their income, the very people who are making the rules haven’t lost a single paycheck during this time.
- Ontario MPP Roman Baber, who previously made news by denouncing lockdowns, is now introducing a bill to slash parliamentarian salaries to CERB levels so elected officials can “appreciate the consequences” of shutdowns. The act is cleverly called the “We Are All in This Together Act.”
- With Israel being the most vaccinated country in the world by far, with over 44% inoculated by at least 1 shot, the country is now announcing a “Green Pass” program for recipients of the COVID-19 vaccine. The “Green Pass” will allow holders to access public spaces such as sports events, restaurants, hotels, and even some grocery stores, while those who haven’t had the shot will remain on lockdown. A bill was also passed allowing authorities to put Israelis who don’t get vaccinated to have their identities put on a list.

- The International Monetary Fund is calling for individuals credits scores to be tied into their internet search history.
- A man working in a Montreal quarantine hotel has been charged with sexually assaulting a detained woman. The woman claims she felt helpless because the rules of quarantine mean not disclosing the location of the captive citizens to their loved ones. Being unable to leave her room, she called hotel security who took nearly 20 minutes to arrive.
- A quarantine enforcement officer in the Toronto area had been changed with extorting and assaulting a woman at her home when he went to do a quarantine check.
- A professional smear campaign by Global News is taking place against a maskless Burnaby man. When Chris Ivany did not immediately exit the store when asked, a gang of Canadian Tire employees aggressively surrounded him and brought him to the floor while choking him. Video footage, captured by another customer, shows Chris’ face turning purple while being choked, exclaiming he couldn’t breathe, while staff attempt to handcuff him. Chris claims he never punched anyone, but Global News said he did and also conveniently cut out the part of the video where he was choked.
- A personal bailout for the bureaucrats is taking place under a new US Bill called the “Emergency Federal Employee Leave Fund.” While US citizens get a one-time check of $1400 USD under the stimulus package, federal employees who choose to take time off work to care for their children get $1400 USD PER WEEK.
- Toronto has a new version of Chair Girl: “Garbage Guy”! During a downtown Toronto Freedom protest, Garbage Guy threw a bag of frozen garbage off his balcony, hitting a protester in the face down below. The victim, Roman, experienced minor scrapes and swelling on the side of his face. Charges have been laid. There were children and elderly protesters that day but, of course, the mainstream media never covered this story, and are still giving updates on Chair Girl 2 years later.
