The Final Days Of The Covidian Cult

By CJ Hopkins

This isn't going to be pretty, folks. The downfall of a death cult rarely is. There is going to be wailing and gnashing of teeth, incoherent fanatical jabbering, mass deleting of embarrassing tweets. There's going to be a veritable tsunami of desperate rationalizing, strenuous denying, shameless blame-shifting, and other forms of ass-covering, as suddenly former Covidian Cult members make a last-minute break for the jungle before the fully-vaxxed-and-boosted "Safe and Effective Kool-Aid" servers get to them.

Yes, that's right, as I'm sure you've noticed, the official Covid narrative is finally falling apart, or is being hastily disassembled, or historically revised, right before our eyes. The "experts" and "authorities" are finally acknowledging that the "Covid deaths" and "hospitalization" statistics are artificially inflated and totally unreliable (which they have been from the very beginning), and they are admitting that their miracle "vaccines" don't work (unless you change the definition of the word "vaccine"), and that they have killed a few people, or maybe more than a few people, and that lockdowns were probably "a serious mistake."

I am not going to bother with further citations. You can surf the Internet as well as I can. The point is, the "Apocalyptic Pandemic" PSYOP has reached its expiration date. After almost two years of mass hysteria over a virus that causes mild-to-moderate common-cold or flu-like symptoms (or absolutely no symptoms whatsoever) in about 95% of the infected and the overall infection fatality rate of which is approximately 0.1% to 0.5%, people's nerves are shot. We are all exhausted. Even the Covidian cultists are exhausted. And they are starting to abandon the cult en masse.

It was always mostly just a matter of time. As Klaus Schwab said, "the pandemic represent[ed] a rare but narrow window of opportunity to reflect, reimagine, and reset our world."

It isn't over, but that window is closing, and our world has not been "reimagined" and "reset," not irrevocably, not just yet. Clearly, GloboCap underestimated the potential resistance to the Great Reset, and the time it would take to crush that resistance. And now the clock is running down, and the resistance isn't crushed ... on the contrary, it is growing. And there is nothing GloboCap can do to stop it, other than go openly totalitarian, which it can't, as that would be suicidal. As I noted in a recent column:

"New Normal totalitarianism — and any global-capitalist form of totalitarianism — cannot display itself as totalitarianism, or even authoritarianism. It cannot acknowledge its political nature. In order to exist, it must not exist. Above all, it must erase its violence (the violence that all politics ultimately comes down to) and appear to us as an essentially beneficent response to a legitimate 'global health crisis' ..."

The simulated "global health crisis" is, for all intents and purposes, over. Which means that GloboCap has screwed the pooch. The thing is, if you intend to keep the masses whipped up into a mindless frenzy of anus-puckering paranoia over an "apocalyptic global pandemic," at some point, you have to produce an actual apocalyptic global pandemic. Faked statistics and propaganda will carry you for a while, but eventually people are going to need to experience something at least resembling an actual devastating worldwide plague, in reality, not just on their phones and TVs.

Also, GloboCap seriously overplayed their hand with has generated.

Which ... fine, let them tell themselves whatever they need to for the sake of their vanity, or their reputations as investigative journalists, celebrity leftists, or Twitter revolutionaries. If you think these "recovering" Covidian Cult members are ever going to publicly acknowledge all the damage they have done to society, and to people and their families, since March 2020, much less apologize for all the abuse they heaped onto those of us who have been reporting the facts ... well, they're not. They are going to spin, equivocate, rationalize, and lie through their teeth, whatever it takes to convince themselves and their audience that, when the shit hit the fan, they didn't click heels and go full "Good German."

Give these people hell if you need to. I feel just as angry and betrayed as you do. But let's not lose sight of the ultimate stakes here. Yes, the official narrative is finally crumbling, and the Covidian Cult is starting to implode, but that does not mean that this fight is over. GloboCap and their puppets in government are not going to cancel the whole "New Normal" program, pretend the last two years never happened, and gracefully retreat to their lavish bunkers in New Zealand and their mega-yachts.

Totalitarian movements and death cults do not typically go down gracefully. They usually go down in a gratuitous orgy of wanton, nihilistic violence as the cult or movement desperately attempts to maintain its hold over its wavering members and defend itself from encroaching reality. And that is where we are at the moment ... or where we are going to be very shortly.

Cities, states, and countries around the world are pushing ahead with implementing the New Normal biosecurity society, despite the fact that there is no longer any plausible justification for it. Austria is going ahead with forced "vaccination." Germany is preparing to do the same. France is rolling out a national segregation system to punish "the Unvaccinated." Greece is fining "unvaccinated" pensioners. Australia is operating "quarantine camps." Scotland. Italy. Spain. The Netherlands. New York City. San Francisco. Toronto. The list goes on, and on, and on.

I don't know what is going to happen. I'm not an oracle. I'm just a satirist. But we are getting dangerously close to the point where GloboCap will need to go full-blown fascist if they want to finish what they started. If that happens, things are going to get very ugly. I know, things are already ugly, but I'm talking a whole different kind of ugly. Think Jonestown, or Hitler's final days in the bunker, or the last few months of the Manson Family.

That is what happens to totalitarian movements and death cults once the spell is broken and their official narratives fall apart. When they go down, they try to take the whole world with them. I don't know about you, but I'm hoping we can avoid that. From what I have heard and read, it isn't much fun.

the miracle "vaccines." Covidian cultists really believed that the "vaccines" would protect them from infection. Epidemiology experts like Rachel Maddow assured them that they would:

"Now we know that the vaccines work well enough that the virus stops with every vaccinated person," Maddow said on her show the evening of March 29, 2021. "A vaccinated person gets exposed to the virus, the virus does not infect them, the virus cannot then use that person to go anywhere else," she added with a shrug. "It cannot use a vaccinated person as a host to go get more people."

And now they are all sick with ... well, a cold, basically, or are "asymptotically infected," or whatever. And they are looking at a future in which they will have to submit to "vaccinations" and "boosters" every three or four months to keep their "compliance certificates" current, in order to be allowed to hold a job, attend a school, or eat at a restaurant, which, OK, hardcore cultists are fine with, but there are millions of people who have been complying, not because they are delusional fanatics who would wrap their children's heads in cellophane if Anthony Fauci ordered them to, but purely out of "solidarity," or convenience, or herd instinct.

Many of these people (i.e., the non-fanatics) are starting to suspect that maybe what we "tin-foil-hat-wearing, Covid-denying, anti-vax, conspiracy-theorist extremists" have been telling them for the past 22 months might not be as crazy as they originally thought. They are backpedaling, rationalizing, revising history, and just making up all kinds of self-serving bullshit, like how we are now in "a post-vaccine world," or how "the Science has changed," or how "Omicron is different," in order to avoid being forced to admit that they're the victims of a GloboCap PSYOP and the worldwide mass hysteria it

The Free And The Brave

By Todd Hayen, Ph.D.

Whatever happened to that (the free and the brave)? Whatever happened to the attitude that had Patrick Henry at the Virginia convention in 1775 say “give me liberty, or give me death”? Whatever happened to the patriotic fervor and the uncanny commitment to face suffering and death that resulted in over two million young men volunteering for service in World War I, and five times that number volunteering to serve in World War II?

Whatever happened to the ability to conquer fear and ride on the excitement for adventure and potential for immeasurable success that drove hundreds of thousands of men and women into the wild, and dangerous, frontiers of the American West? Whatever happened to the spirit that filled the souls of those that faced stark adversity, danger to life and limb, that lead over 50,000 hapless men and women (mostly men) into the jungles of Central America to build the Panama Canal?—ultimately killing over 5,000 of them as a result of accidents, all manner of diseases including malaria and dysentery?

What happened?

Yeah, this is about us, guys (me included!) Sure, women can be brave—any biological sexual orientation can activate the warrior archetype—but more commonly it is the gendered male that falls into this archetypal constellation—bravery—a compulsion to protect those he loves, have a critical and logical assessment of a difficult situation, and the force and power, at the very least a potential force and power, ready to inflict whatever necessary to protect partner and family, community and nation. We, us men, have seemed to have lost much of that. Have we become a bunch of puss-balls?

Dr. Mark McDonald, a prominent medical doctor with a specialty in psychiatry, doesn’t mince words when he says while describing the psychological state of men and women during this crisis: “we essentially have men with no balls, and then we have histrionics, women who have no emotional containment, because there are no men to contain them anymore.” Sexist? Maybe some will think so, but McDonald is not putting all the blame on one sex, or exclusively on the masculine or feminine archetypes, the responsibility here is rather well balanced.

What does this mean?

Very basically it means we have created a culture that has done a pretty good job of emasculating men—the radical feminist movement, as well as a general lack of situations where men can express their “man-ness” in a healthy way, has been a big part of the problem. “Toxic Masculinity” is a phrase and concept that has taken the world by storm, and contributes quite a bit to the confusion that men are experiencing while trying to ascertain what a “real man” is in today’s “anti male” culture.

“Oh boo hoo” some of you may be saying. “Men, through their powerful patriarchal history of abusing women and treating them as inferior partners in relationships deserve a little pull back!” There certainly is truth to that, but two wrongs don’t make a right. You can’t carve out an essential part of being a “man” without some collateral damage, all the way around.

So what does being a “real man” have to do with bravery? A lot, actually. Facing adversity and danger, primarily in order to protect the physically weaker, is a very important attribute of the masculine archetype of warrior, or even king if you want to get more detailed about it. Historically and traditionally the man has been the protector, the physical, and sometimes intellectual (intelligence that is present in logic reasoning and critical thinking) found in masculine archetypes (again, archetypes both men and women have access to). These attributes are primarily directed toward protection and outwardly projected as strength and resolve. This often stabilizes the more emotional feminine archetypal factors that again, typically, are activated by the female, or woman, in a relationship.

As a psychotherapist, and an archetypal psychologist at that, I see these archetypal powers and influences playing out in my clients every day. Most of the problems I find in a couple’s therapy stems from an imbalance, or a dysfunction, in these energies of masculine and feminine. Again, the “man” in a couple can be activating both masculine and feminine archetypes, as well as the “woman.” The problem comes in if the archetypes activated are inappropriate, out of balance, and create a result that is unexpected, undesired, or not beneficial. Most of these influences run in the unconscious, so very seldom are they consciously manipulated.

It wasn’t until I met Dr. McDonald that I connected some very important dots. McDonald recently wrote and released a book titled “United States of Fear.” The subtitle of the book, “How America Fell Victim to a Mass Delusional Psychosis” is the primary focus. McDonald holds nothing back when he addresses what he believes to be a fundamental cause of this mass psychosis. He believes that women (feminine archetypes driving the woman’s behaviour) need a strong, and masculine man, to contain her emotionality (due to the unfettered expression of her feminine archetypes.) McDonald, in an interview given on Jerm Warfare, said:

“Do you think men with masks on make women feel safe? It only shows they have no balls. I’ve spoken with female police officers who see men in camouflage, tattooed, driving around in trucks with gun racks—wearing masks. They tell me, ‘this does not make me feel safe. This makes me afraid. If they are this scared of a virus, how will they react to a real threat—what’s going to happen when the bear comes out of the woods? What’s going to happen when a rapist tries to attack me? What’s going to happen when my children are going to be kidnapped by the man in the park, what are they going to do? With their mask on are they going to say, “please stop. Please. Please.” They’re not going to put their lives on the line. They won’t even put their mouth on the line.”

Harsh words, my brothers. Harsh words, but I think quite on the money.

Is this the only thing that is driving the collapse we are seeing in those that cannot stand up to this current tyranny, and say “enough is enough, step back!” No, of course not, but, in my opinion, it is a large part of the problem. Our culture, at least in the West, has been set up for this to happen. We have become more and more dependent on the government taking care of us, thus losing our own personal drive to develop character and strength. We depend on government and authority to think for us, and tell us what is best for us, to, in a word, parent us. We comply, we stay children, and we ultimately suffer.

The brave hold onto what makes them free and are willing to fight for it. Freedom is a God given right, not one bestowed upon us by any other authority. The healthy masculine archetypes of warrior and king have at their side the symbolic sword representing their power over adversity and danger. There is a time for the warrior to pull the sword from its scabbard just a few inches to allow the sun to glint off of its polished surface, flashing in the eyes of a potential enemy, letting them know who they are dealing with. And then there is the time to pull the sword completely free from its confines and slash what is seriously threatening the warrior and those he loves.

Now is the time to fight.

The Price of Freedom: A Book Review

By Sean Arthur Joyce

We can be thankful that nothing disappears without a trace. The steps of our ancestors continue to resound into the present. This is one of the realizations I had while reading Vera Maloff’s fine new book, Our Back Warmed by the Sun (Caitlin Press, 2020), in which the story of the Doukhobors in the West Kootenay is told through her own family story. Maloff’s grandfather Pete was a key figure in the Doukhobor Peace Movement—a writer, intellectual and dedicated peace activist. In these days of easy “clicktivism,” it’s easy to forget that people such as Maloff were willing to put their bodies on the line for their beliefs. Pete Maloff was repeatedly jailed for offenses as mild as leading a peace march in Nelson, BC in 1929, considered “sedition” by the authorities of the day. It was their refusal to serve in the Tsar’s army and the burning of all their weapons in Georgia that led to the wholesale immigration of the Doukhobor community to Canada in 1899. A few Doukhobors who had been imprisoned in Siberia followed in 1914. To the Sons of Freedom and other Doukhobor peace activists, this ethic extended logically to a refusal to pay taxes, on the principle that, “We are followers of Christ, therefore we cannot serve two masters. We cannot pay taxes on which firearms and ammunition are constructed.” (p. 68) For this they suffered severe repression by the Canadian government, despite being well aware of their pacifist beliefs when they entered the country.

However, some historical events leave deep, lasting grooves in the psyches of generations. Not long ago in New Denver I spoke to a woman of Doukhobor descent, a psychologist. Given her profession, I thought she would be ideally placed to write a history of the Sons of Freedom sect. But even for her these waters were too dangerous to wade into. She said the divisions caused by the Sons of Freedom remain to this day within the Doukhobor community, with a lingering bitterness many would prefer to forget. I had discussed with the psychologist the principle of epigenetics—the intergenerational transmission of trauma, a principle she was well acquainted with. Typically, studies show, the first generation—the traumatized—prefer to bury the trauma in forgetfulness, and seldom tell the story to their children. Second generations tend to inherit the psychological and physical symptoms of trauma even though they know nothing of its source. Generally it takes the third generation to finally start asking questions as to why this is occurring. Often it’s they who become the historians unearthing the story—the source of the trauma—with the goal of laying the ghosts of the past finally to rest. I wrote about this extensively in my book, See, ‘The Price’ p.3

The price of freedom can be high

Laying the Children’s Ghosts to Rest, chronicling the history of Canada’s British Home Children in the West.

Vera Maloff, to her very great credit, treads courageously into these controversial waters. Her grandfather Pete Maloff’s steadfast commitment to pacifism caused division even within his extended family, some of whom criticized him for “abandoning” his family to fend for themselves for up to two years at a time while he was incarcerated. Others in the Doukhobor community simply viewed his crusade as a hopeless, Quixotic quest against a determined, all-powerful government. The author’s mother Elizabeth, or “Leeza,” is a major source of information for the book, although many of her memories had been suppressed for decades due to their traumatic nature. She emerges as another key figure in the story, having herself endured removal from her family to the BC Girls’ Industrial School in Vancouver in 1932 along with her siblings. Fortunately this jarring separation lasted only about a year, but in the life of a child a year can seem an eternity, and its damaging effects often last a lifetime. Having read Helen Chernoff-Freeman’s excellent book Girl #85, about her experience being interned in the New Denver residential school in the 1950s, I was shocked to learn in Maloff’s book that it wasn’t the first time the government had taken away Sons of Freedom children.

I had also not known that the logging camp known as Porto Rico south of Ymir, BC was used briefly to intern both children and parents of Sons of Freedom families, including Maloff’s mother, her three young siblings, her grandmother and great-grandmother. “At that time my grandfather Pete Maloff was imprisoned for six months hard labour in Oakalla for “obstructing a police officer” in the peaceful protest march against land taxes going to support the military.” Unsurprisingly, Pete Maloff, according to Vera’s mother Elizabeth, “was always followed,” and there were repeated attempts to infiltrate the Doukhobor community by the authorities. One such spy, Sasha Keersta, should have been an obvious one to spot, and indeed, Elizabeth’s mother (Pete’s wife) had a premonition of him in a dream. Keersta “showed up each time with a different car and driver” (p. 85) and was always nattily dressed—a major clue given the fact that it was during the Great Depression years when everyone else was walking around threadbare. A similar story of infiltration occurs in Jacques Lusseyran’s World War II memoir And There Was Light. Lusseyran’s intuition as to the true nature of people was nearly infallible; his blindness from an early age seemed to give him an extrasensory ability others lacked. The one time he didn’t trust it proved to be the time he let an infiltrator into the French underground. There’s a lesson there for today’s resistance leaders in the anti-lockdown Freedom movement.

Very much as with today’s Covid era governments passing arbitrary, unconstitutional legislation, when World War II broke out, in 1940 the Canadian government passed a military registration law—the National Registration Act—for all males 16 and over. Pete Maloff refused to register, a “crime” which was made punishable by three months imprisonment, “but Father was sentenced to several terms of three months.”As noted above, Maloff spent six months at hard labour at BC’s infamous Oakalla Prison simply for leading a pacifist protest march on Nelson’s Baker Street. (pp. 66–68) I’ve often thought that the Doukhobor community has never quite recovered from the repeated blows struck against it by the Canadian government. This is confirmed by the writing of Pete Maloff himself:

“As years went by, the Government pursued its relentless onslaught upon the Doukhobors, so that many bitter conflicts have taken place since... All these persecutions and oppressions upon the Doukhobors were presumably committed with the intention of assimilating them into the Canadian way of life. ...It seems to me that this policy of assimilation, especially when done by violence, coercion and intimidation is one of the chief causes of Doukhobor unrest.” (p. 229)

In light of this, Canada’s rhetoric of “inclusion” and “diversity” rings hollow and deadly false. The “relentless onslaught” against Doukhobor communities seems to have been successful in its aim of assimilation. As with many immigrant communities, the goal now seems to be to blend in, get a good education and a good-paying career. Without a new generation of Pete Maloffs willing to put their bodies on the line for their beliefs, the continuity is broken and a great tradition all but lost. One of the great strengths of Vera Maloff’s book, however, is the realization that there’s a price to pay for such unbending idealism, with Pete’s family losing his presence for months or even years at a time. This in itself can leave emotional scars on a family. The author thus paints a nuanced picture, carefully avoiding either a condemnation of such activism nor necessarily condoning it.

The Maloff family were also actively involved in assisting Vietnam War resisters entering Canada via the Slocan Valley, at a time when mainstream society stigmatized them as “cowards,” “traitors,” or “freeloaders.” Just as with the Doukhobors, it took a great deal of moral backbone to leave one’s country and family behind—possibly forever. While others in the community stood aloof from these “hippies,” the Doukhobors generously helped them learn the skills of self-sufficiency they lacked. Most were more than willing to learn and pitch in with the workload, as the chapters on war resister Len Walker reveal. Seeing a potential protégé with shared ideals, Pete Maloff kindly took Walker under his wing.

From a writing perspective, the sole flaw I found with this book is the frequent shifts of voice from Vera as the narrator to her mother or one of her ancestors. It’s clear that even when she’s speaking in the voice of another person she’s using her skill as a storyteller to make the narrative flow seamlessly, but this can make the reader forget who is actually speaking. Late in my reading I realized the book includes a family tree which would have been helpful in sorting out who’s who and who is speaking at any given time. An index would also have been helpful, particularly for historical researchers. Still, minor flaws in a book that will earn its place as an invaluable contribution to the history of the West Kootenay.

We can be grateful that Vera Maloff has added this vital chapter to the fragmented history of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor community. Maloff has said in interviews that she felt she needed to get her family’s stories down before her elders passed on. Her mother Elizabeth turned 100 in 2020, so her concern is justified, although the Caucasus region from which the family hails is known for some of the longest-lived people in the world. Indeed, they were studied by Soviet scientists anxious to uncover the secrets of their exceptional longevity. According to author Philip Marsden in The Spirit Wrestlers and Other Survivors of the Russian Century, who travelled the Caucasus in the 1990s after the collapse of the Soviet Union, some were rumoured to have lived to 135 or even longer.

Maloff tells me that plans are in the works to publish Pete Maloff’s sole surviving completed book, Doukhobors, Their History, Life, and Struggle. This brings me back to my opening line: We can be thankful that nothing disappears without a trace. There are many good reasons why ancestors are venerated around the world, and books such as this are just one of their invaluable legacies to us in the present. And as Vera Maloff reminds us, we must never forget the price people such as Pete Maloff paid to leave us such gifts. ## Government & Media Can’t Handle Objection

By Ken Lori

For two years we obeyed the rules yet the moment we challenge them you call us white nationalists. For two years you monitored us yet the moment we repel the surveillance you call us subversive.

For two years we tolerated censorship yet the moment we expose it you warn of “unacceptable views.”

For sixteen months we endured pressure to take an unproven vaccine yet the moment we refuse you call us reckless.

For two years we tolerated your narrative yet the moment we mock it you alert the police of collective action.

For two years you shut down businesses yet the moment we’re pushed too far you call us aggressive.

For two years you put us out of work yet when we post objections you delete us.

For two years we kept distant from friends and family yet when we demand a humane approach you call us unsympathetic to the .077% that would die of COVID.

For two years Costco and Walmart crushed competition yet when we declare an unfair fight you ignore us.

For two years we quarantined as directed yet when we refuse, you fine us.

For two years we did everything you pressured us to yet when we convoy to Ottawa you initiate a public relations war.

When you lose the public relations war you’ll call in the troops because that’s what the Government & Media

Party do when they lose the confidence of the people. For two weeks we’re going to invite you to the table yet instead of engaging in discussion you’ll plant hooligans then blame us for the “insurrection.” We know your playbook because you’ve been using it for two years with immunity.

Unfortunately for you, starting January 29 you’ll have to play by our book. Worry not, it doesn’t contain any of your name-calling, fear mongering, manipulation, pressure, threats, denial, abuse, censorship, lies, destruction, overreach, violations or response to your public relations war.

Should, heaven forbid, we feel compelled to put any of these tactics to use, you’ll recognize them. You trained us well.

What Will You Do With Your Fear?

By Brian Taylor

Dear fellow Canadians, please consider my story and see if you find anything of value. We live in a time when we have a great opportunity. An opportunity to show who we are and what we are made of as citizens of this country. Are we going to allow fear, and hatred, and discrimination to rule us? Or will we rise above it to live out the beliefs that we claim to possess?

We have been taught in our public schools that we as white people, took children from the homes of native Indians and put them in residential schools. Besides being taken from their parents and culture, many of them were treated very poorly or abused in these schools. Why did we do this? Were we afraid of them? Did we not care about or understand them and their culture? Did we think we were doing it for their own good? Many years later are we proud of these things? Or rather do we not consider that as a shameful black mark on our society? Ashamed that a modern, God fearing, advanced people would be willing to do such a thing?

Canadians often boast about being a multi-cultural society and our Charter Of Rights And Freedoms upholds the freedom of conscience and religion as well as the supremacy of God. Do you think it's wise to educate ourselves before we pass judgment on someone? Have you ever made a quick judgment based on just what you see, only to find out you were wrong? Do you think that if we had tried to love and understand the native people, things might be better for us all today? All these questions have obvious answers.

Please now let me put this in the perspective of the current struggle we find ourselves in. There is a relatively small group of people living right among us, whose consciences and beliefs are not the same as the larger group. They are not trying to be difficult. They are not trying to hurt you. They are those that have chosen not to be vaccinated. From the very early days of the pandemic they tried to listen and discern very carefully if the things they were hearing from the government and the media matched the things they saw in real life and what they knew from experience and common sense. They also took the time to study and learn more about masks, lockdowns, and the effects of isolation on humans, especially on children. Lastly, to learn about what a true vaccine is, what it should do, and if the definition of a vaccine has changed lately?

All the answers they found led them to take the steps they did and to resist the things they were hearing from the government and the media. It just didn't add up to them. Once again, these people do not hate you and are not trying to hurt you. They are just regular folks who see things differently. Might it be worthwhile to try and understand them before passing judgment? Might it be worth taking the time to check out the research and evidence they have of the other side of the story? Is it possible that there might be something to gain from educating ourselves further about these things? If you want to buy a car, do you only listen to the salesman who stands to make a profit off the sale? Or do you like to have an unbiased opinion before you spend your money? Would it be worth taking the time to visit a few of these people to see if they are in fact the racist, misogynists that our prime minister has called them? To try and understand them and where they are coming from and how they feel?

Now please allow me to take this letter one step further. To make it more personal and reveal something about myself. Last September, my only brother was returning from a fishing tournament near Regina. He had done well in the tournament and had won the "Angler of the year" award. My brother has a beautiful wife and four children who were so proud of him. In the middle of the night on his way home, pulling his fishing boat, an oncoming vehicle is believed to have crossed the line and caused a head on crash. Everyone was killed. My brother, his fishing partner and the other driver, all dead. I got the phone call early Sunday morning from my mother whose voice was convulsing with tears and agony to tell me that my brother was dead. It's been very hard to understand and make sense of these events but it has caused us all to lean in closer to God.

As I write this it has been four months since the accident. We have all been affected greatly and in different ways. One of the things that has happened to me is my thoughts while I am driving have become fearful. For awhile, every time I met a vehicle on the highway I would cringe and worry that the driver may be distracted by a cell phone, falling asleep, or intoxicated and cross the line to kill my family and I. Every vehicle I met would cause these fearful thoughts to go through my mind. The other drivers on the road were out of my control and thus a danger to me. Slowly I realized that I can't live that way. I like to go places, I like to drive my race car, I like to take my family on vacation, I like to drive to church. If I let those fears rule over me I would simply have to stay home forever to avoid the risk of being in a car wreck.

This brings me to my conclusion about what risks do we as a free people have to be willing to take in order to live and enjoy our lives? Are we content with just staying alive? Or do we want more than that? Is it worth wearing a mask and putting masks on our children's beautiful faces against the odds that they may contract a virus that has been proven to be no danger to them? Is it worth the risk to our conscience and integrity to teach our children and ourselves that they shouldn't be around those that have chosen not to get vaccinated? That those people are less than us? Does it help us feel better if we label them as anti-vaxxers when we talk negatively about them?

What does God say about all of this? How we treat each other? How we treat our neighbour? Friends, we can't live this way. What will you do with your fear? Respectfully,
Brian Taylor

10 Reasons Why I Don't Trust You, Justin Trudeau

By TJ Five onTwitter: @TJ_Five_

As an ordinary Canadian, I've always had reasons to be a little cautious about putting trust in politicians and bureaucrats. Frequently over-confident, often distant and unrelatable, almost always a little too slick and greasy. But in these past two years, I've seen you for what you are: simply unworthy of any trust. Here are just ten reasons why I don't trust you (I could easily name ten more - heck, I'll do just that later):

1. You didn't look after residents of Long-Term Care Homes, even when the pandemic really started there and was concentrated in those homes.

Up to now, 80% (9,650 out of 11,970) of all Ontario Covid deaths have been of people aged 70 and older[i], with a disproportionate number of these being LTCH residents[ii]. You pretended that there was no graduated risk based primarily on age and health condition.

2. You didn't differentiate between hospitalizations and deaths "with Covid" and "from Covid". The difference is obviously important, and you ignored it until 2022.

For the vast majority of cases, even a lay person with no training could correctly determine whether someone is in hospital "with Covid" or "from Covid". If they are brought in with a gunshot wound, or following a car accident, or with bee stings all over their body, and you happen to run a PCR test that comes out positive for Covid, this is "with Covid". Having Covid is not why they are in the hospital. And yet, all along, you have counted all such people as Covid hospitalizations and, if they died, as Covid deaths. This is blatantly dishonest and completely unnecessary - and to this day, no one has come clean to say how many hospitalizations and deaths were "with Covid".

3. You continue to pretend that natural immunity does not exist.

Your vaccine passport scheme segregates people into two groups: "the vaccinated" and "the unvaccinated", totally ignoring a third group: "the immune", i.e., those who have had Covid and recovered. The corporate media plays along, pretending that natural immunity is a controversial concept. Yet, natural immunity is one of the most basic elements of epidemiology. This indicates that you are not serious about the management of illness within a population nor about the prudent use of resources (i.e., by ignoring natural immunity, you force jabs on people who don't need them, because they are immune).

4. You have pretended that the negative consequences of the policies you employed in response to Covid do not exist, or do not matter.

Unemployment, especially amongst poor and working class people, has been ignored. The decline in mental health (resulting in depression and suicide), domestic and drug abuse, and child neglect and abuse that accompanies the economic impact of lockdown and the isolation of lockdown have been ignored, dismissed or minimized. As have all the developmental harms suffered by children. No serious consideration has been given to what it will take to recover the proper functioning of and trust in our social institutions - political parties, public health, police, teachers, doctors, courts, legislatures, sports codes, human rights bodies, etc.

5. You've been irrational and illogical.

If your mask works to stop the spread of Covid, then your mask works, and it doesn't matter to your health whether I wear a mask or not. But if your mask doesn't work to stop the spread of Covid, then just leave me alone—I refuse to join in your silliness. It's like you insisting that I also carry an umbrella to make sure that your umbrella protects you from the rain. The same goes for the vaccine: if it works, then it works and it protects you from Covid: good for you. But if it doesn't work, why on earth should I take it too? And if it only sort-of works, for a limited time - again, why should I be manipulated / coerced / bribed / shamed into taking it? So, you've promoted plainly illogical positions and attitudes in support of universal masking and vaccination. This means one of two things: either you are daft or your motives are suspect.

6. You have betrayed tens of thousands of dedicated health workers.

You have silenced and betrayed all those committed health professionals who willingly exposed themselves to significant risk throughout 2020 caring for Covid patients in hospitals. When there were no vaccines, you praised these workers as heroes; when the vaccines arrived, you forced vaccines on them against their choice and despite their immunity. Your attitude, in direct contrast to these workers, seems to be: "I'll support whatever is convenient for me, and damn the human beings affected."

7. You deliberately misrepresent information (in other words, you lie with data).

You continue to present misleading data, by categorizing people as "unvaccinated" who are hospitalized or die within 14 days of their first jab. This is especially dishonest now that it is clear that most adverse reactions to the jab occur within days following the jab, and that people are more susceptible to Covid immediately after getting the jab.

8. You have promoted bigotry and discrimination between groups of Canadians.

With the corporate media's help, you are now scapegoating an entire massive sub-population of Canadians, including thousands of health-workers, police officers, and ordinary working class people who exercise their right to bodily autonomy. You are blaming them as a group for a healthcare crisis, something that has never been done in the history of a free and fair Canada. Did you ever blame smokers, obese people, or drug addicts for taking up space in the healthcare system? (And what about all the vaccinated folks also taking up space in the same system?) Choosing to demonize these Canadians will not only

You Need To Know This!

By Al Jacob

This is no conspiracy theory or coincidence, this is a puzzle put together from information available on online public domain.

Dear fellow Canadians,

Please take a moment to read my story. In 1989 December I was a freedom fighter in the Romanian revolution and now that the trucker convoy arrived in Ottawa, I will witness the second revolution here in Canada, where I emigrated for a better life. Not in my wildest dreams would I have been placing myself in the same situation where I was in 1989: Broken, all my rights infringed, dictated what to do and say, and forced to believe in things I didn't.

I compare Justin Trudeau with Nicolae Ceausescu because both of them treated people like ants, stepped on their pride, freedoms, beliefs and often spit them in the face with lies.

A couple days ago a video surfaced on the internet in which Klaus Schwab was praising Justin Trudeau while bragging about how Mr. Shwab's people penetrated western governments and have slowly taken control of them. I took the time and did some digging and found all the pieces of the puzzle on one public website. Disturbing to find out how many politicians in JT's cabinet are sharing Klaus Schwab's "GREAT RESET" idea and are working tirelessly to achieve it.

Here are the facts from <https://www.youngglobal-leaders.org>. I will copy and paste some text from this website so you can faster comprehend what is going on.

"Klaus Schwab, Founder and Executive Chairman of the World Economic Forum, created the Forum of Young Global Leaders in 2004 to help the world meet increasingly complex and interdependent problems. His vision was to create a proactive multistakeholder community of the world's next-generation leaders to inform and influence decision-making and mobilize transformation."

The following Canadian people are named by Klaus Schwab's organization and here is how you find them: <https://www.younggloballeaders.org/community> just type in the names you are interested in.

Jagmeet Singh
Leader, Canada's New Democrats, New Democratic Party of Canada. He does not approve of the truckers demands because he is probably a true believer of the "GREAT RESET". His name pops up on member's page #79.

Chrystia Freeland
Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister of Canada.

Karina Gould
Minister of Families, Children and Social Development, Employment and Social Development Canada.

François-Philippe Champagne
Minister of Innovation, Science and Industry, Innovation, Science and Economic Development Canada.

Ailish Campbell
Ambassador of Canada to the European Union, Global Affairs Canada.

Elissa Golberg
Assistant Deputy Minister for Strategic Policy, Global Affairs Canada.

Renée Maria Tremblay
Senior Counsel, Supreme Court of Canada. I am not accusing her of anything, just wondering where she is when our fundamental human rights are infringed by JT's government?

As you can see there are some politicians in our government responsible for what is happening now in Ottawa and none of them had the courage to come out and face the Canadian nation before it was too late. Combing through this website you will find the glue that really fastens the puzzle pieces together.

Mark Zuckerberg
Founder and Chief Executive Officer, Meta

Vasudha Vats
Vice-President, Pfizer.
And the biggest piece of the puzzle!!!!!!

Restaurant Owners Defy Lockdown Orders

By Tammy With

On January 3 the Ford government announced further measures against Omicron, and once again the restaurant business was put to sleep; but in Lambton County, two business owners are very much awake.

Tom Stoukas, owner of Athena's diner, has been fighting for his business since the beginning of the pandemic. Opened only 3.5 months before the lockdowns began, Stoukas had managed to create a loyal customer base. Stoukas and his partner Krystal Roberts, planned to purchase the building after their first year of operations. Their business was thriving and they were in the early stages of hiring staff and plans to renovate.

When the initial lockdowns took effect in March, Stoukas followed the orders. He sat in lockdown for 5 months with no income other than the subsidies offered by the federal government and the savings he had put together from their success with the diner. They were relieved when the orders were lifted, but lockdowns left a heavy toll on restaurants. "We went from a thriving business, a part of the community, a place where people meet to...it's a shell of itself", says Stoukas.

Then came the vaccine passports. "I was following the rules, even though I didn't really agree with them, but I was reaching my limit, and where I did was the vax pass," says Stoukas. He continued to run his business as he had pre-pandemic. The business was one of only a handful of Lambton businesses that fought back against the passports. Soon Lambton Public Health was called to these businesses and they quickly stopped serving the unvaccinated, but not Stoukas. "I can't stand for it. It's not about the money, it's about the principle," says Stoukas. In the 4 months following, Athena's received 5 visits and 3 fines for $880 each under the reopening act.

The restaurant has since acquired a local following of like minded people looking for a place to call home. "We are fighting for freedom of choice and the charter of rights. People should have the right to choose what goes into their bodies", says Roberts.

Then on January 3, the Ford government announced restaurants would only be permitted to serve customers on a take out basis, essentially putting the final nail in the coffin for many Ontario business owners. "Once the lockdown came I decided I didn't want to do it because it's bad for society, it's bad for my employees health, my mental health," says Stoukas. For him, the impacts of the pandemic have already damaged his business. "I'm probably not going to survive. The only way is if overnight they said no more lockdowns, no more vaxpass, open for business. But that has to happen like, tomorrow", says Stoukas.

On January 14 they received their sixth visit from Lambton Public Health, this time they were accompanied by the Ministry of Labour and the local Police. The visit was in regards to the dining room being open in violation of the reopening act. Stoukas had the foresight to videotape the entire visit. In the video, Stoukas can be

Dear editor

I think the Canadian people and the trucker convoy have the right to know that these people in our government and leadership have strong affiliation with Klaus Schwab and his interference with our life and future as a nation and as a country. I think whether you support or oppose what is going on in Canada, as journalists it is your duty to defend the interest of the nation, your brothers, sisters, mom's and dad's interests.

As we said back in Romania in 1989 to our soldiers, cops, fire fighters, doctors and nurses, secret service members, news and media outlets: "Watch out on which side of the barricade you are, the history books will remember you".

And let me finish with another Romanian saying: "there are good men, bad men and truckers; you can mess with the first two but not with the TRUCKERS"

With love and respect toward all Canadians, seen defending his diner as the member from Lambton Public Health threatens to lay charges if he does not comply immediately. "I used to be a businessman they came to for charity donations, now I'm a criminal", says Stoukas.
Al Jacob

Later that day Stoukas posted the video on facebook. Within hours the reaction from the public both near and far was overwhelming. By Saturday he was receiving phone calls from places like Ottawa and British Columbia from people who wanted to lend their support.

"People say, how can I support you? I say spread the word. I want people to share with the person next to them that this is wrong and I think more people are doing that," says Stoukas. "Open your doors, stand up. The more that stand together, the more people that open their doors and say enough is enough, the better." adds Roberts.

Since the video surfaced, Athena's business has been reignited, possibly even enough to save the business.

West of Petrolia, on Aamjiwaang First Nation, Sherry Stewart, owner of The Leaky Tank has been fighting a similar battle.

In business for 22 years, The Leaky Tank has shown resistance since the beginning. Shortly after defying the initial lockdown orders in March of 2020, Stewart was shut down by Lambton Public Health. "I went home with my tail between my legs for a couple of weeks. I felt like the lord was talking to me, like really Sherry, this is all the faith you have in me. So I opened back up. They came back a few weeks later and threatened me with a $100,000 fine but ended up giving me a warning," says Stewart.

Since then, Stewart has used her restaurant as a platform to fight for freedom. "They can't take away our freedoms, we can only give them away, and fear is the catalyst to do so," she says.

During the fall election, Stewart lent her voice to the PPC, encouraging people to vote for a government dedicated to the people. Stewart herself has also shown an interest in politics, "I am probably going to run for council on this reserve, and I am going to gather people who are like minded because we need to take the majority of council and we need to take this place back because the government is trampling on our sovereign rights," says Stewart.

Like Stoukas, Stewart received a visit on January 3. She, too, took video of the altercation and posted it to social media. Within hours her page was filled with support from around the globe. "Our video has reached nearly 2 million views. We had a soldier call from Hawaii yesterday to say he is just so impressed with this place, and that people like us are the reason he keeps fighting," says Stewart.

Stewart is asking other restaurants and small business owners to join the fight. "I wish people would just open their dining rooms and not discriminate. If they push back, we are either going to see what happens in the courts or we are going to be victorious under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms," says Stewart.

Climate Change – A Crisis Or An Agenda?

By Susan Mutch

“THE SKY IS FALLING, THE SKY IS FALLING!” “Our planet is doomed!” Climate alarmists have been busy beating this doomsday drum for some years now. “Humans are the problem! And don’t forget those cows, those methane-belching cows!”

After the powers-that-be wring out all of the fear and control they can with their covid ruse, do not be surprised if climate alarmists escalate to fever pitch. After all, the elites have more work to do to destroy industry, make you poor, and maintain the fear factor for control over the populace. Mainstream media will be sure to provide the heightened climate propaganda.

The UN’s Alarmists

The United Nations, et al, have been endeavouring for years to shape the public mind into believing that planet Earth is endangered due to human-caused global warming. But let us understand that variation in climate is perfectly normal. Some global warming advocates would have you to believe that it was only after the start of the industrial revolution when man started burning fossil fuels that the world’s climate was affected, but the mere presence of a change in climate is not evidence of man-made global warming.<sup>1</sup> In fact, between 1910 and 1940, there was a warming trend resembling that of today—and it was not caused by fossil fuels in industry, for little existed. Carbon dioxide emissions cannot be blamed here! Dr. Judith Curry, a well-known climatologist, declares that the warming then observed had to be caused by natural factors. “None of the climate models used by [the alarmist] scientists now working for the United Nations can explain this older trend. Nor can these models explain why the climate suddenly cooled between 1950 and 1970, giving rise to widespread warnings about the onset of a new ice age. I recall magazine covers of the late 1960s or early 1970s depicting the planet in the grip of an annihilating deep freeze. According to a group of scientists, we faced an apocalyptic environmental scenario—but the opposite of the current one.”<sup>2</sup>

False Claims

Alarmists would have you to believe that “global sea levels are rising as a result of human-caused global warming, with recent rates being unprecedented...” Dr. Curry’s response? “Sea level is rising, but this has been gradually happening since the 1860s. We don’t yet observe any significant acceleration of this process in our time.” “Here again, one must consider the possibility that the causes for rising sea levels are partly or mostly natural.”<sup>3</sup>

NASA claims that the western U.S.A. is experiencing more frequent wildfires, and that they are bigger, more severe, and more destructive, with 15 of the 20 most destructive wildfires in California history occurring within the past decade. But the U.S. National Interagency Fire Center (NIFC) reports data on U.S. wildfires back as far as 1926. Their data showed the number of acres burned is far less now than it was throughout the early 20th century, and that wildfires are far less frequent and severe than was the case throughout the first half of the 20th century (see chart below). Interestingly, in March 2021, data prior to 1983 was removed from the site.<sup>4</sup>

In Dr. S. Fred Singer’s book Hot Talk, Cold Science, he shows that the alarming global warming scenarios have no scientific basis. He reveals facts, including the following:

CO2 has not caused temperatures or sea levels to rise beyond historical rates.

Severe storms, heat waves, and droughts have not increased in frequency or intensity since 1970.

Coral reefs are not being harmed by climate change.

Alarmist climate scientists have hidden their raw temperature data and deleted emails, then undermined the peer-review system to squelch debate.

In sum, Dr. Singer declared there is no climate crisis resulting from human activities and no such threat on the horizon.

A Political Agenda?

Dr. Curry resigned due to the dubious climate science serving a political project. “A person must not like capitalism or industrial development and should favor world government rather than nations.” “The doctrine of climate change has so overshadowed the science of climatology” that numbers of respected scientists are walking away from the craziness, believing that “the alarmism on this issue is unwarranted.”<sup>5</sup>

Dr. Curry decries a political agenda against industrial development and favouring a world government. What do these have to do with climate change? Is there more to the narrative than what meets the eye? Economist and founder of the World Economic Forum (WEF), Klaus Schwab, seems to allude to such in his book, The Great Reset: “If, in the post-pandemic era, we decide to resume our lives just as before (by driving the same cars, by flying to the same destinations, by eating the same things, by heating our house the same way, and so on), the COVID-19 crisis will have gone to waste as far as climate policies are concerned.”<sup>6</sup> COVID-19 and climate policies. COVID-19 “a waste” unless we use less fossil fuels? Are we seeing a step one, step two program—one that has nothing to with either health or weather?

The director-general of the World Health Organization (WHO), Dr. Tedros, would like for you to believe that climate change is causing new diseases: “As man-made climate change has taken hold over the last four decades, dozens of new infectious diseases have emerged or begun to threaten new regions, including Zika and Ebola.” They would now add coronavirus to that list to try to further convince us that “these outbreaks would continue to occur until human beings ceased and desisted from spewing gazillions of carbon particles into the atmosphere.”

Were these claims true, why did the many world leaders attending the climate summit in Glasgow, Scotland opt to fly in their private jets, “spewing gazillions of carbon particles”? And why did this same crew go without masks and social distancing at the G7 meeting in Cornwall, England? Do we have hypocrites pushing the covid and climate change stories? Apparently, they don’t believe their own dogma.

Censorship

Those who have done their homework know that both the covid and climate change narratives have no science to prove their claims. And with both, any dissenters—despite having the true science in hand—are vilified and censored. Scientists daring to question the United Nations’ consensus on human-caused global warming can expect to be ostracized from the scientific community, as are scientists and medical professionals opposing the covid narrative. When governments and their “experts” close the door to any scrutiny, thinking people should take note. Something other than science lurks behind the rhetoric.

From Covid to the Fourth Industrial Revolution?

The purpose of the covid and climate scare-mongering is actually connected—locking down the economy (particularly the middle class) and changing the fundamental way we work, live, and interact with others.<sup>7</sup> Think not that this is for our well-being, the toll of human suffering from the covid lock downs being proof enough.

“Coronavirus can trigger a new industrial revolution. The disease could be the shock we need to harness new technology and new ways of working.” Ed Conway, The Times. Mr. Conway seems to have a technocratic dream for the future. Perhaps he read Klaus Schwab’s book, The Fourth Industrial Revolution.

“The coronavirus stymies the forces that have been generating greenhouse gases for decades...The rational response for any country determined to prevent loss of life is to follow China’s lead and lock down their economy to stem its spread.”

Lock down the economy to save lives? Watch your step, folks! Slippery propaganda slope ahead.

The Chief Culprit?

It has been said that CO2 is the chief culprit for climate change and that “carbon emissions need to be reduced in order to avoid an apocalyptic climate crisis. This is perhaps the biggest lie of our era, supported by the pseudoscience of highly political, unelected organizations, such as the IPCC and other NGOs. The notion that CO2...is inherently problematic is not only false, but it is being weaponized against humanity itself.” Far from being a villain, CO2 is our friend. Carbon dioxide is naturally occurring and is a building block to life on earth.

“Plants cannot live without CO2 and man cannot live without plants... Without an atmosphere containing greenhouse gasses (GHGs) the earth could not support life. Carbon dioxide is one of the atmospheric gases that help moderate earth’s temperature. Furthermore...the agricultural industry...intentionally increase CO2 up to ten times its normal concentration to encourage plant growth in greenhouses...Plants need CO2 to exist... There is far greater danger in lowering the CO2 level, than in increasing the level.

“According to climatologists, water vapor and clouds account for about 60 to 95% of the GHG effect, while CO2 has a much smaller effect... Climatologists who are pushing the global warming agenda are focusing on a minor GHG component and ignoring the major contributors to the GHG effect—water vapor, and clouds.”<sup>8</sup>

Dr. Fred Singer notes that many proposed “solutions” to the global warming “crisis”—like carbon taxes (more money out of your pocket)—would have severe consequences for economically disadvantaged groups and nations.

Weather Stability Promised

The scare-mongers have been busy for a long time with their doomsday predictions for planet Earth. After all, the threat of rising sea levels and scorching heat parching agricultural land ought to compel the fearful victims of propaganda to surrender their thriving industries along with what is left of their freedoms and rights. But fear not. God has promised us a relatively stable climate in this post-Flood world:

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease. Genesis 8:22.

The powers-that-be pushing climate change depend on your ignorance and blind compliance to ensure success for their agenda—as is the case with covid. They hope for your continued addiction to mainstream media, their propaganda mouthpiece designed to rivet you with fear, make you compliant, and convert you to warriors for their evil cause. Unplug and detox! The covid and climate boogymen would soon disappear.

Future generations will wonder in bemused amazement that the early 21st century’s developed world went into hysterical panic over a globally averaged temperature increase of a few tenths of a degree, and, on the basis of gross exaggerations of highly uncertain computer projections combined into implausible chains of inference, proceeded to contemplate a roll-back of the industrial age.

Richard Lindzen,
Atmospheric Physicist

I’ve often heard it said that there’s a consensus of thousands of scientists on the global warming issue and that humans are causing a catastrophic change to the climate system. Well, I am one scientist, and there are many that simply think that is not true.

John Christy,
PhD Atmospheric Science

Scientists who dissent from the alarmism have seen their grant funds disappear, their work derided, and themselves libeled as industry stooges, scientific hacks or worse. Consequently, lies about climate change gain credence even when they fly in the face of the science that supposedly is their basis.

Send In The Clowns: CBC Tries Claiming Russia Is Behind Freedom Convoy

By Spencer Fernando

Being forced to pay for a propaganda network that has become a parody of itself is another reason CBC must be DEFUNDED!

When a ‘news’ network starts to resemble something from The Onion and becomes what appears to be a parody of itself, you can be sure that it has long passed its ‘best before date.’

And so it is with the CBC.
For years, CBC ratings have been horrendous, even as they gobble up more and more of our taxpayer dollars.

Why would CBC get more and more money even as they fail?

Because it’s not about ‘success’ in any business sense of the term.

Instead, it’s about the desire of Justin Trudeau and statist politicians to have a state propaganda outlet that they can use to introduce the most absurd narratives into the public sphere, while attempting to hide behind a veneer of ‘legitimacy.’

And what has Justin Trudeau gotten for all the taxpayer money he took from us and gave to CBC?

This:

ence?

They expect people to believe this, even as we can all see the Canadians of all backgrounds who are expressing their support for the convoy.

It is insanity.

What is CBC really trying to do here?

Let’s consider the agenda behind CBC’s claims, because it wasn’t just a throwaway line or a mistake.

CBC is trying to do a few things here:

First, they are trying to delegitimize the protest itself. Justin Trudeau tried claiming the protest was ‘small’ and a ‘fringe group,’ claims which have been completely refuted by the size of the convoy and the many Canadians of all backgrounds supporting it. So, now that Trudeau’s claims have been proven wrong, CBC is trying to pivot to undermine the whole thing itself.

Secondly, CBC is trying to play on the fact that many Canadians watch US news, and are thus primed by networks like CNN to blame anything they don’t like on Russia. Even after the Russia collusion narrative against Trump fell apart, many people still remain locked in that false mindset, and CBC is taking advantage of that.

Third, CBC is trying to polarize the country. Similar to how Trudeau always speaks in the most condescending and arrogant manner, demonizes the convoy, and completely dismisses the views of those who disagree with him, CBC is trying to divide Canadians.

Both Trudeau and CBC (is there really a difference at this point), use the tactic of dividing people and then claiming that anyone angered by those tactics is to blame for the divisiveness. While the message of the convoy is about bringing Canadians together and standing up for our rights and freedoms, the message pushed by Trudeau and CBC is about demonizing Canadian Citizens, and continuing to ‘justify’ draconian restrictions on our rights and freedoms. DEFUND CBC!

CBC fails to get strong ratings, and when people do watch they are subjected to divisive propaganda that does the bidding of the federal government and the Liberals.

All of that would be fine, if CBC was funded by those who chose to fund them.

But, as with all statists, CBC and the Liberals don’t feel we should have that choice.

Instead, they force us to fund them by taking our tax dollars and giving them to CBC without our consent.

The more of our tax dollars they take, the more they will continue to serve the interests of the Liberals to the detriment of the rest of the country, since the Liberals are the ones who keep giving our money away to prop the CBC up.

Think about it this way: Those who support the freedom convoy are being demonized as tools of Russia by CBC, even as they are forced to fund CBC.

That is a disgrace.

As a believer in free speech, CBC has every right to say what they want and push whatever perspective they want, but that only applies if they are funded through choice, rather than through coercion.

Copying authoritarian states

That coercion has been what politicians like Trudeau and many provincial premiers have used to try and get their way, using state power and taking away rights and freedoms.

In that way, they have moved Canada closer and closer to being an authoritarian state, rather than the free country we are supposed to be.

And, as I noted on Twitter, it’s quite ironic that the CBC is trying to claim the convoy is a result of foreign influence, since that’s the exact argument that authoritarian states like to use whenever anyone pushes back against them:

“The irony is this is exactly what authoritarian governments claim about every protest. It’s always a foreign country to blame. Interesting to see CBC fully embrace the role of state-propagandist.”

You can’t be a free country and have a state-run propaganda outlet

While CBC’s attempt to claim Russia is behind the convoy is laughable in its absurdity and desperation, it is also dangerous, because it shows the attitude that exists in the CBC and in the government.

Remember, this is the same government that is trying to censor the internet and expand government control over what we can and can’t say, read, and listen to. They are clearly emulating authoritarian states, trying to demonize and silence their critics and use every opportunity to expand their power at the expense of our freedom.

Canada can never really be a free country if we are forced to give our tax dollars to a state propaganda outlet that demonizes Canadian Citizens and seeks to push the narrative of the government.

This is why, for the good of our nation, CBC must be defunded, and—if it exists in any form—must be made to rely only on voluntary contributions, not our tax dollars.

Canadians must have the right to freely pick and choose which outlets and organizations we support, rather than having statist politicians impose their own malign will over our own freedom.

Trudeau's Intergrity In Question, Yet Again!

make them even less likely to comply with your tyranny, it will also lead us all down a very dark path of persecution that we will all regret.

9. You support censorship.

You think that I don’t have the intelligence and good sense to listen to differing points of view and make up my own mind about my own health. You have the arrogance to think that you can treat me like a child, deciding what I will hear and what I will see and be able to decide about. When prominent and credible Canadian organizations and individuals with solid medical professional credentials have spoken out against the mainstream Covid narrative, you have sided with their persecutors and censors.

10. You do not respect my bodily autonomy.

Apparently you would respect my right to carve up my own body, to take harmful and illegal drugs, to smoke, to over-eat or under-eat (all of which could lead to me “taking up a hospital bed”, of course), to kill another human being (through abortion), even to kill myself (through euthanasia or suicide); and yet somehow you have decided—in a liberal western democracy, no less—that I have no right to say “NO” to a drug treatment. Even obscure international organizations like the United Nations would disagree with you. My individual circumstances and medical condition do not matter to you, given your arbitrary decree that exemptions will be “infrequent”. By your blanket mandates, you have completely broken the trust of the patient-doctor relationship that is supposed to be protected, private and personal.

A More Comprehensive Perspective Please

By Pat Keating

I would like to take this opportunity to mention a few comparative examples of current and historical events that might widen the readers’ perspective with regard to today’s coronaviruses and the resulting vaccine mandates.

I am not an accomplished writer and will therefore present my thoughts in point form in order to keep this article as short and simple as possible.

1. The military involvement of wealthy western nations over the last number of decades in the Middle East has been presented to its citizens by political leaders, military experts, and mainstream media platforms as necessary for world peace, stability and the safety of its citizens from militant terrorists. Similar to today’s pandemic coverage; overwhelming mainstream media coverage using images, slogans, rhetoric, dogma and commentary has been used to justify these military actions which have resulted in the expenditure of trillions of dollars in tax payers money. Those of us who questioned these actions and the mainstream narrative are sometimes regarded as ignorant, subversive and unpatriotic. We have been told to ‘support the troops’ and venerate the ‘frontline heroes’. We are also told by the authorities and experts that the actions taken, with the resulting collateral damage, are unfortunate but necessary. These countries are now seemingly worse off than before. Vast sums of taxpayers money have ended up in the hands of a few multinational military and industrial corporations. Instead of roads, hospitals, housing, community centres, power generating infrastructure etc. being created, many have been bombed and destroyed. Now we are no more secure than before. In fact we are less secure, with more people who are angry and radicalized because of the deaths and destruction caused. Sometimes fear, whether real or perceived, makes societies react in negative, destructive and nonsensical ways. This seems to be similar to some of the actions taken in response to this current pandemic. Maybe the money and public resources devoted to weapons etc. could have been used at home and abroad to invest in hospitals and critical infrastructure in preparation of our growing populations of sick and elderly. This would have helped mitigate the health crisis we have today.
2. The development and implementation of antibiotics. This has been a game changer in modern day medicine, helping to prevent injury and death due to microbial infections with seemingly little adverse risk. The effectiveness of antibiotics has led to widespread use and sometimes overuse in both humans and animals. One such example is the well documented overprescribing of antibiotics by doctors to their patients as a ‘cure all’ measure for many ailments. Another example is the overuse of antibiotics for profit, in intensive commercial livestock settings to promote animal growth through the prevention of microbial disease. This overuse has led to the emergence of antibiotic resistant ‘superbugs’ which have caused a host of problems and complications, costing society dearly. Can we compare this overuse to the possible overuse of vaccines as a ‘cure all’ for infectious diseases? It should be noted that children growing up in Ontario during the 1970’s and early 1980’s received a total of 22 vaccine doses for the prevention of infectious diseases as compared to now (2020 ‘pre covid’) where children receive 66 vaccine doses by the time they are 18. Antibiotics are ‘good’. More antibiotics are not necessarily ‘better’. Vaccines are ‘good’. Are more vaccines necessarily ‘better’? May there be unforeseen negative consequences?
3. The development and introduction of semi-synthetic and synthetic opioids. Another medical technology which seemed at first to be a panacea in the treatment of both chronic and acute pain. Large pharmaceutical companies developed, heavily marketed and promoted these new drugs downplaying the potential risks. Medical doctors embraced these drugs, prescribing them and in many cases overprescribing them. In recent years it has come to be understood that these drugs have significant potential in creating strong mental and physical addiction as well as the risk of death or injury due to overdose. This has caused a huge expense to society, putting a large strain on an already fragile health system. Further legal investigations have exposed some pharmaceutical companies with the manipulation and obfuscation of data under the guise of proprietary information. This is not an isolated scenario. Large pharmaceutical corporations have been investigated and convicted by judicial bodies worldwide

- for withholding and manipulating data, sometimes many years later after the damage to society has been done. All in the name of profit and competitive advantage. Does the public at present have access to all the data regarding these current vaccines? No. We have enough data which has been studied by medical scientists and specialists worldwide raising legitimate questions and concerns as to their safety, efficacy, and necessity, disregarding any far fetched conspiracy theories.
4. Macintyre powder. This has been in the local news lately. It is an aluminum and aluminum oxide powder that was administered (inhaled) by miners between 1943 and 1979. It was thought to prevent silicosis among miners. For many it was mandated by their employers as necessary for their health and safety. Only later was it discovered to have no protective effect and in fact results in an increased risk of Parkinson’s disease and possibly other neurological diseases. The studies are ongoing. The possible comparisons to vaccine mandates speak for themselves in my opinion.

5. I could continue with many other examples of drugs and medical treatments that at first seemed only beneficial with little adverse risk (ie. thalidomide, some implants, negative reactions to multiple drug use etc.) only later to be recognized as causing unforeseen harm many years later after exposure to large segments of the population, especially to the sick and elderly.

In conclusion with the above examples in mind, it seems to me that one of the main underlying themes of advanced societies is: the few and powerful disproportionately control and shape the perspectives and actions/reactions of the many, often for their own benefit. This is done by various means including the use and control of public resources, the control of information by media including books, newspapers, and digital platforms. Some of us have difficulty believing those in positions of power both public and private would offer nothing but the absolute truth concerning important issues of the day. I believe it is incumbent on the individual to question everything presented to us in society. Be curious. Be critical. Exercise your intellect through the pursuit of knowledge. This might help make for a better society in my opinion. Sometimes what at first may seem to be a clear cut issue is in fact more complex and nuanced. I hope this letter helps the reader widen his or her perspective and to understand/ empathize with those of us who choose not to participate in this current vaccine regime. Instead, choosing a healthy diet and lifestyle and if necessary, undertaking successful and well documented therapies in the event of contracting these ever mutating corona viruses.

Respectfully, Pat Keating. Tehkummah

What Is Mandatory?

By Kuen Chow

Directly from the Black’s Law ‘legalese’ dictionary. Illegitimate “authority” and man’s “law” entrapment language 101: Definitions taken from the attached link and key words

Mandatory

“The action of mandamus [Latin for mandatory, “We command”] is one, brought in a court of competent jurisdiction, to obtain an order of such court commanding an inferior tribunal, board, corporation, or person to do or not to do an act the performance or omission of which the law enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station. Where discretion is left to the inferior tribunal or person, the mandamus can only compel it to act, but cannot control such discretion.”

Did you read that correctly? By legalese definition, YOU are INFERIOR to the arbitrary “laws” of the state. I thought the government and it’s agencies worked for us? I thought they’re supposed to protect our sovereignty?

A mandate is a LEGAL act to compel, NOT LAWFUL and “CANNOT control such discretion”...

Discretion: “Individual choice or judgment”

Translation...

The state and their agencies can try to compel you to do something, but unless you give them consent, they CANNOT take further action, by their own definition.

Just because someone in “authority” tries to command you, you have a choice. A mandate isn’t a law and doesn’t require your participation. Wearing a mask or getting injected is a choice...

IT IS NOT LAW OR LAWFUL

Legal and lawful are NOT the same...

You are complying with arbitrary legal acts that have no power or lawful standing

Any police officer handing out fines, demanding to see your exemption, escorting you off the premises, holding you under duress or ANY other compelling act/command are all UNLAWFUL acts/commands and have NO real power

- You do NOT need to show exemption
- You do NOT need to pay unlawful fines
- You do NOT need to cooperate

Policing is supposed to be done via consent, so they can’t do a damn thing without it... They only get away with what they do because you’re ill informed and don’t know how to deal with them...

It is YOUR duty as a sovereign citizen to not comply with unlawful acts of an unlawful government and unlawful police. It’s YOUR duty to stop complying with tyrants that have ZERO clue about the “laws” they are enforcing.

- Language matters
- Consent matters
- Constitutional and Common Laws matter
- Natural Law is the source of your rights and common law is the enactment and protection of your natural rights
- Rights matter
- Freedom matters
- Cherish it and fight for it...
- When are you going to start being brave and stop complying with tyranny...?

House Calls: From Confusion To Clarity

By StandUpCanada.solutions

Stand Up Canada’s mandate of empowering Canadians to stand up for themselves, goes far beyond the legal realm. We fundamentally understand that if people are not well emotionally or physically, they will not be able to stand up for themselves, in any context.

Mental health issues are at an all time high in Canada. Suicide rates have skyrocketed. Eating disorders in children and teens have increased by 30%!

Think lockdowns still work?

The painful reality is that we are divided in our hearts, homes and communities thanks to lockdown measures. This divisiveness is caused by social isolation, loneliness, disconnection, “us vs them” mentality (binary thinking), anger and fear.

Make no mistake about this. Being cut off from your family and friends is extremely detrimental to your health in every sense. As Canadians, we are all at great risk of losing our love for one another if we don’t do something about this, and fast.

We couldn’t stand by and do nothing about this. So, we collaborated with retired MD J. Barry Engelhardt, who also has a Masters in bioethics to address this problem.

We created a conversational video series called “House Calls: From Confusion to Clarity”. This series contains 18 short, insightful and eye-opening conversations about important subjects that many of us are facing today.

FEAR – ETHICS – VACCINE MANDATES – CONCERNS & CONFUSIONS – CRITICAL THINKING – FOLLOW-THE-SCIENCE

This video series addresses the mental health issue in two ways. First, this series speaks to any true concerns you may have about many of the covid issues, allying any fear you or your loved one may be experiencing. Second, these videos are meant to be shared with anyone in your life where you have strained or broken relationships due to polarized views over covid.

These are not sensationalized conversations. Rather, they are calm and inviting conversations between two people discussing concerns that all of us share, no matter what side of the fence we may be on.

We truly hope these insightful and eye-opening conversations will bring people from confusion to clarity and nudge friends and families a little closer together. We could all use this right now.

Video Topics with Description
Introduction

Introduction to video series - conversations between Paula Tucci and J. Barry Engelhardt MD (retired), CCFP, MHSc (bioethics).

We recommend you watch the segment on Ethics to help deepen your understanding on other topics discussed, particularly Vaccine Mandates.

Exploring Fear Part 1

Fight or flight and binary thinking/reacting (right vs wrong). Dangers of polarized thinking and behaviour. We need to shift from binary to spectrum (shades of grey) to stop the divisiveness - to talk about our differences.

Exploring Fear Part 2

Analogy of fear in relation to pandemic. Gov’t using precautionary principle. Binary thinking/reacting (right or wrong). Fear is always a driving factor in binary reactions. We need to move from binary thinking/reacting to a spectrum of possibilities. Fight or flight. Turning into a debate culture.

Exploring Fear Part 3

Leaders using language to divide people/society. Many types of fears. Fear of losing traditions, jobs, previous lifestyles, finances, sense of self, relationships. Loss and mourning. We need to fix this before it’s too late. Fear sells = big business$. Science and democracy need differences in order to thrive. Need respectful dialogue. Impact on mental health - children impacted most.

Where’s the Ethics? Part 1

Ethics not really addressed in pandemic. Ethics is based on values = how we treat other people. Golden rule - treat others as you would like to be treated. All “codes” were developed over the years of how to treat one another - ethical in nature. Hammurabi Code of Babylon, Hebrew Ten Commandments, Roman and Greek laws that formed much of our present legal system, Magna Carta, American Constitution, Nuremberg Code and Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Where’s the Ethics? Part 2

Rights and obligations need to be reciprocal. Rights of the collective should not trample that of the individual. How much can society demand of any given individual to accept risk, harm or loss of freedom, purely to protect society?

Where’s the Ethics? Part 3

If society has the right to protect itself and obligate an individual to accept certain risks or harms or limitations on freedoms, then it must make a valid moral argument for doing so. And any rule must have exceptions. Anytime in history when we have not had compassion, or robotically applied a rule, things go south in a very bad way. Nuremberg is a major example. Nuremberg Trials were created because of horrific abuses during World War II in Nazi Germany. North America is not immune to such behaviour - the 40-year Tuskegee Syphilis Study (1930’s to 1970’s) in the USA, involved depriving black men of treatment (penicillin) for syphilis.

Where’s the Ethics? Part 4

Most stringent measure implemented in a pandemic has been vaccination. Issues discussed with concerns about these medical interventions - new gene technologies. Questions on safety and efficacy due to “warp-speed” creation. Efficacy waning on these medical interventions, which explains booster shots.

Vaccine Mandates Part 1

No medical intervention against any coronavirus; mRNA brand-new technology never used before; short time-span of releasing medical intervention; normal procedure is to do a risk-stratification process. Issues with mandates for essential workers and in particular to nurses. Vaccinate or terminate is unethical and immoral. Front line hero’s being asked to forgo their own safety concerns. Have we lost our moral compass as Canadians?

Vaccine Mandates Part 2

Discussing the Nuremberg Code which deals with medical experimentation and how this relates to the current clinical trials happening now. Voluntary consent is absolutely essential. Nuremberg Code arose out of experimentation on people during World War II without their consent, which was deemed as Crimes Against Humanity.

Brian Peckford, and others sue MOT

By JCCF.ca

The Justice Centre filed a lawsuit in Federal Court on January 26, 2022 seeking to strike down the federal government’s mandatory Covid-19 vaccine requirements for air travellers. The court action is on behalf of several Canadians from across Canada whose Charter rights and freedoms have been infringed.

On October 30, 2021, the federal government announced that anyone travelling by air, train, or ship, must be fully vaccinated. The travel vaccination mandate has prevented approximately 6 million unvaccinated Canadians (15% of Canada’s population) from travel within Canada and prevents them from flying out of Canada. Some of the Canadians involved in the lawsuit cannot travel to help sick loved ones, get to work, visit family and friends, take international vacations, and live ordinary lives.

The main applicant in the case is former Newfoundland Premier, The Honourable A. Brian Peckford, the only surviving drafter and signatory 40 years after the 1982 Constitution and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms was enacted.

“It is becoming more obvious that being vaccinated does not stop people from getting Covid and does not stop them from spreading it”, says the former Premier. “The government has not shown that the policy makes flying safer—it simply discriminates”, he notes. “When I heard Prime Minister Trudeau call the unvaccinated ‘racists’, ‘misogynists’, ‘anti-science’ and ‘extremist’ and his musing ‘do we tolerate these people?’ it became clear he Discussing Charter sections 1, 2 and 7.

Vaccine Mandates & Children Part 3

Ethics and risks - particularly to children. Studies in 2000 were not done on children, pregnant women or people with auto-immune disease. Children were not getting sick or dying from this virus. They pose no risk for getting or transmitting this virus. Concerns with the new and untested technology for these medical interventions. If children are not getting any benefit from this medical intervention, they are doing it for the benefit of adults. They are essentially functioning like human shields. A grandfather’s perspective.

Concerns & Confusions Part 1

We highlight the many areas of concerns and confusion in the pandemic that happened outside of Canada at first.

Concerns & Confusions Part 2

We address the major concerns and confusion that happened in Canada. Items of inconsistencies addressed.

Critical Thinking

Understanding the following concepts can help with critical thinking: You may not know or realize what you don’t know. Harm can happen if you simply do not know about something. Your experiences can dictate your thinking and make you biased. There is no such thing as being 100% safe. Risk must not be binary - needs to be looked at as a spectrum. Context really is everything.

Follow the Science Part 1 – The Basics

In order to “follow the science” we need to first explore what this phrase means. What exactly is science? And what are we following? Science is not just knowledge; it is a process of discovery.

Follow the Science Part 2 – Bias

Understanding the Basics from Part 1, we look at how Bias is unavoidable and how it is affecting our ability to do science in the pandemic. Bias = to some degree, we all see what we want to see, we see what we already believe to be true.

Follow the Science Part 3 – Harms vs Benefits

Building on the understanding from the Basics in Part 1, to understanding how Bias affects our ability to do science in Part 2, we now look at Harms vs Benefits. No room for dogmatic thinking or character attacks in science. Science is not about beliefs or consensus.

Follow the Science Part 4 – Medical Science

Final segment, building on the new understanding from Part 1 to 3. This is a conclusive wrap up of how all these contribute to a better understanding of Medical Science.

is sowing divisions and advancing his vendetta against a specific group of Canadians—this is completely against the democratic and Canadian values I love about this country. The federal travel ban has segregated me from other Canadians. It’s discriminatory, violates my Charter rights and that’s why I am fighting the travel ban” adds Mr. Peckford.

The Justice Centre’s legal challenge cites violations of Charter rights including mobility, life, liberty and security of the person, privacy, and discrimination. The lawsuit also challenges whether the Minister of Transportation has the jurisdiction to use aviation safety powers to enforce public health measures.

The court will be asked to hear the case on an expedited basis given the serious infringement on Canadians’ mobility and other rights. Canada is the only country in the developed world that has banned Covid vaccine-free travellers from air travel.

“Despite the confirmed science that the vaccine does not stop people from getting or spreading the virus and the repeated warnings from the WHO, it’s clear the federal government is out of step and arbitrarily restricting Canadians fundamental rights and freedoms,” says Keith Wilson, Q.C., lead counsel for the legal challenge. “It is profoundly disturbing that a marginalized group in Canada—the unvaccinated—are essentially prohibited from leaving the country,” he adds.

“Canadians have been losing hope in the Charter and our courts. We are going to put the best arguments and evidence forward so that the court can clarify where governments overstep,” concludes Mr. Wilson.

To Save One, We Kill Three

Robert Du Broy, BSc, MBA

“Which one of you, having a hundred sheep and losing one of them, does not leave the ninety-nine in the wilderness and go after the one that is lost until he finds it?” (Luke 15:4) A good shepherd would do this only if the ninety-nine were not at risk and the stray had a long life of wool production ahead. What if the flock were 8,500 sheep, the saved stray was already beyond its life expectancy, and the shepherd would come back to find three of his younger sheep devoured by a wolf? That is, optimistically, the situation with Covid-19 injections. More than three vaccine deaths happen for every Covid-19 death prevented by Covid-19 injections.

For the sake of these back-of-the-envelope calculations, I will refer primarily to the Pfizer/BioNTech mRNA injection and US data because they are the best documented. This biologic accounts for 58% of doses, 46% of deaths, and 45% of adverse events of the three biologics authorized for emergency use .

First, how many Covid-19 injections does it take to save one life? You have probably heard the Relative Risk Reduction claim of 95% efficacy (relative to the placebo) for the Pfizer biologic. In fact, the relevant number is the Absolute Risk Reduction (ARR), which is 0.84% . The inverse of the ARR gives the Number Needed to Vaccinate (NNV) to prevent one Covid-19 case, which is 119. The NNV is country-specific. The NNV for Pfizer in Israel is an even less impressive 217. At the US Covid-19 Case Fatality Rate (CFR) of 1.4% , it takes 1/CFR=71.4 cases to produce one fatality. The CFR is also country-specific and reflects both the general health of the population, the quality of health care, and the definition of a case. The CFR is 1.3% in Canada and 0.3% in Australia and Norway. To prevent one Covid-19 death, we must vaccinate NNV / CFR=8,500 people.

As a side note, those 8,500 injections are not free . In addition to the roughly $17 for the first dose to $28 for the second dose the providers can charge for administration—to double-dose every American would cost $16 billion—there was the $10 billion Operation Warp Speed funding, the cost of doses spoiled due to expiry after a month or improper refrigeration, and the cost of the incessant promotion campaign. Assuming a modest cost per impression of $0.0125 times the population of the US times seven times a day for a year, top-of-mind awareness would cost $11.5 billion. This does not include the bureaucracy to administer the campaign. All paid for with tax dollars. I have not even touched on the social costs and the cost of administering vaccine mandates.

The second factor is how many people die after receiving the injection. A recent Columbia University study determined that the Vaccine-induced Fatality Rate (VFR) is 0.04%, or 4 in 10,000 injections.

Thus, the 8,500 injections needed to save the life of 1 Covid-19 case would result in 3.4 vaccine deaths.

The details make this outcome even less attractive. The average age of Covid-19 fatalities is about the same as the average life expectancy. One multi-country study found that a greater proportion of Covid-19-related deaths exceed life expectancy than occur below life expectancy. In the UK, the average age of a Covid-19 associated fatality is 80 years of age . In contrast, the average age of Covid-19 vaccine deaths in the US in 2021 was about 72 years of age . We would expect that average age to decrease as the injections among younger age groups become increasingly prevalent . Thus, Covid-19 does not shorten life expectancy but the injections do.

That conclusion does not even take into account the injection’s medium to long-term fatality risks. Pfizer’s product monograph admits that these are unknown . “Very rare cases of myocarditis and/or pericarditis following vaccination with COMIRNATY have been reported during post-authorization use. These cases occurred more commonly after the second dose and in adolescents and young adults. Typically, the onset of symptoms has been within a few days following receipt of COMIRNATY. Available short-term follow-up data suggest that the symptoms resolve in most individuals, but information on long-term sequelae is lacking.” (p. 18) In fact, these cardiac conditions are irreversible; myocarditis has a mortality rate of 20% after one year and 56% after 4.3 years; pericarditis mortality is 7% after five years. “The (Study 2) participants were unblinded to offer placebo participants COMIRNATY when they became locally eligible under regulatory approval in December 2020” making it impossible to study adverse reactions relative to a control group after that time. (p. 26) “Carcinogenic potential was not assessed, as carcinogenicity studies were not considered relevant to this vaccine.” “Genotoxic (causing genetic damage or alteration or preventing DNA repair) potential was not assessed, as genotoxicity studies were not considered relevant to this vaccine.” (p. 48) This seems odd for a technology that the NIH calls gene therapy .

Here are other surprising statements in the monograph. “The safety and efficacy of COMIRNATY in children under 5 years of age have not yet been established.” “The safety and immunogenicity of a booster dose of COMIRNATY in individuals 65 years of age and older is based on safety and immunogenicity data in adults 18 through 55 years of age.” (p. 4) “As with any vaccine, vaccination with COMIRNATY may not protect all recipients. Individuals may not be optimally protected until at least 7 days after their second dose of vaccine.” (p. 17) “It is unknown whether COMIRNATY has an impact on fertility.” (p. 18) “The safety and efficacy of COMIRNATY in pregnant women have not yet been established. It is unknown whether COMIRNATY is excreted in human milk. A risk to the newborns/infants cannot be excluded.” (p. 19) “No (drug) interaction studies have been performed.” (p. 33) “In a repeat-dose toxicity study, rats (experienced)... decreased red blood cell mass...Full or partial recovery from all findings was observed following a 3-week recovery period.” (p. 48) Partial recovery?

Although we have yet to observe long-term harms, the injections clearly provide no long-term benefits. The efficacy of the biologics, such as it is, wanes after three months and has limited efficacy against variants . Booster protection might diminish after 10 weeks .

Much as the Vaccine-induced Fatality Rate (VFR) cited above is 0.04%, or 4 in 10,000 injections, the incidence of adverse reactions can increase with the number of doses. Thus, VFR could increase with subsequent doses, and there appears to be no end in sight for the number of doses . Turkey is up to its fifth dose . As the VFR could trend upward, the CFR could be on the downswing, because variants tend to be less fatal than the wild type of a virus . Variants also tend to displace the wild type. Over time, the evolving equation could lead to more vaccine deaths per injection and fewer Covid case lives needing to be saved.

In addition to fatalities, we must not forget the risk of severe vaccine injuries. VAERS records 786 birth defects, 36,758 permanent disabilities, 24,343 life-threatening events, and 113,303 hospitalizations to date following Covid-19 injections . The fatalities data also exclude the 3,511 miscarriages so far.

A good shepherd would not save one sheep at the cost of more than three now and likely more in the years to come.

Some Of The Most Absurd Things That Have Happened In Recent Weeks

- Students in Nova Scotia are now required to wear a 3-layer mask.
- Toronto strip clubs are now offering booster shots for covid-19.
- Israeli news study finds an increase in sudden deaths among athletes. The average annual number of FIFA sudden deaths between 2000-2020 was 4.2. In 2021, it skyrocketed to 21, 5 times the annual average. FIFA athletes are required to be vaccinated in order to travel.
- A Vancouver family with a young cancer patient was evicted from Ronald McDonald House in January due to vaccination status. Ronald McDonald Houses across Canada are evicting anyone aged 5 and up who is unvaccinated.
- A Quebec Judge suspends a man's visitation rights with his child because he is not vaccinated.
- After evaluating 9 studies, HART (Health Advisory & Recovery Team) shockingly finds that "the evidence of an increased infection rate in the first two weeks after vaccination is well established." Examples of the studies they looked at: a Brazilian study showed a 69% higher infection in the first 13 days after the shot and a Danish study showed a 40% increase in the first 2 weeks. And even Pfizer's own data showed a 40% increase in suspected Covid vs the placebo. This muddies the data since a person is still considered to be "unvaccinated" until two weeks after their shot.
- Alberta Health removes 3 graphs from their "COVID-19 Alberta statistics" page that show both how ineffective the vaccine is, and how our health agencies are fiddling with the numbers. The graphs showed that individuals are many times more likely to test positive, get hospitalized, and die within the first 14 days of their first vaccination (when they are still considered to be totally unvaccinated by our government). The math works out so that 47.6% of single dose vaccinated people who are hospitalized with covid are considered to be "unvaccinated" in the statistics, and 55.6% of single dose vaccinated covid deaths are considered to be "unvaccinated." Graphs may still be found on archive.org for <https://www.alberta.ca/stats/covid-19-alberta-statistics.htm> by clicking January 8.
- Nova Scotia issued an edict making it illegal for citizens to gather along the highway and cheer on the truckers driving to Ottawa to protest vaccine mandates. On January 28t, Nova Scotia issued the "Highway Blockade Ban" warning citizens that they are not to gather in support of the convoy of trucks. The edict names the "2022 Freedom Convoy" specifically, making it a crime punishable by up to $100,000 to participate in, finance, aid, encourage, or support "an interruption of the normal flow of vehicle traffic" in relation to the convoy.
- Trudeau government causes serious supply chain issues after mandating truckers crossing the boarder to be vaccinated. According to the Canadian Trucking Alliance, even before the mandate, Canada was short 23,000 truck drivers (brought about by tough conditions and onerous regulations), and 15% of truck drivers who cross the border (18,000 drivers) are currently unvaccinated, making an existing problem much worse.
- On Parliament Hill, Brassard, a Conservative critic for ethics and accountable government, revealed 33 Million Canadians (87% of the population) currently have their devices monitored by the Canadian Government as "part of the response to COVID-19" to "track the spread of COVID" by the Public Health Agency of Canada.

- Bank of Canada says food price increases are outpacing inflation.

- Data from University of California San Francisco finds the vaccinated with COVID are more symptomatic than the unvaccinated with COVID.
- People died at rates 20% higher than normal after second COVID shot, Swedish study shows. According to a 34-page paper on vaccine effectiveness, published in Preprints with The Lancet, 3,939 of 4.03 million Swedes who received the second dose of a COVID vaccine died less than two weeks later, a rate 20% above normal.
- Quebec announced it plans on taxing the unvaccinated. Adult Quebecers who are not vaccinated and don't have a medical exemption may be forced to pay a "health contribution," Quebec Premier Francois Legault announced on January 11th, adding that the unvaccinated should be forced to pay for the supposed "extra burden" they are placing on the health-care system.
- Stores in Quebec over 1500 square meters (including Canadian Tire, Winners, and Walmart) and any liquor and marijuana store are now are now requiring a QR coded vaccine passport and are banning the unvaccinated.
- Another booster is coming. Pfizer is now saying it will have an Omicron-specific shot ready in March 2022.
- In regards to a large party he held in his residence in May 2020, UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson claims "nobody told me" his party was against he rules.
- China has altered the ending of the film Fight Club to stifle any inspirations of citizen rebellion.
- Google was caught red-handed manipulating it's search results to suit the narrative. Inventor of the mRNA vaccine technology and vaccine mandate opponent Dr. Robert Malone talked about "mass formation psychosis" on a Joe Rogan podcast and within minutes when googling "mass formation psychosis" the search results showed "It - looks like these results are changing quickly... it can sometimes take time for results to be added by reliable sources." Eventually sources suiting the mainstream narrative appeared and more accurate results were buried.

- An undercover video by Project Veritas reveals disadvantaged populations are taking excessive vaccines for a tax funded gift card incentive. The recorded video show employees of New York contracted medical provider, DocGoAmbulnz, discussing how people are often successfully overcoming barriers in exchange for the financial incentive of a $100 gift card. "You find people that do it 5, 6 times...for the incentive."
  - A large study (Sharff et al) by one of the US's largest healthcare organizations (Kaiser Permanente) finds, when comparing CDC data to their healthcare system, "the true incidence of Myopericarditis (heart inflammation) is markedly higher than the incidence reported to the (CDC's) advisory committee." The study found the CDC is only reporting roughly 10.6% of myopericarditis cases in young males after their second dose.
  - NYPD detained a 9 year-old girl, and arrested 5 adults, for entering New York's Natural History Museum while unvaccinated.
  - CDC study (Leon et al.) using data from California and New York indicates that prior infection offered better protection that vaccination during the Delta wave.
  - CEO of US Life insurance company for employees "OneAmerica" says deaths are up 40% among people aged 18-64 during the second half of 2021—and it's not covid on their death certificates. "We are seeing the highest death rate we have ever seen in the history of this business. This is not just being seen by OneAmerica, the data is consistent across every player in this business."
  - Toronto study titled "Effectiveness of COVID-19 vaccines against Omicron or Delta infection" (Buchan et al.) finds those who receive 2 doses of an mRNA vaccine have an increased risk of testing positive for COVID. These findings are consistent with the last study that looked at vaccine efficacy on omicron (Hansen et al.) that showed after 90 days Pfizer customers are 76.5% more likely and Moderna customers are 39.3% more likely to be infected compared to unvaxxed people. Additionally, the researchers found, that those who have received the jab are just as contagious as the unvaccinated, once they get infected.
  - An article by renowned epidemiologists Dr John Ioannidis and Dr Jay Bhattacharya published an article titled "Assessing mandatory stay-at-home and business closure effects on the spread of Covid-19" and found "there is no evidence that more restrictive non-pharmaceutical interventions ('lockdowns') contributed substantially to the bending of the curve of new cases in England, France, Germany, Iran, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, or the United States."
  - PayPal shuts down the Informed Consent Action Network's account, suddenly canceling thousands of recurring donations. As PayPal put in an email to the medical freedom organization ICAN (creators of "The Highwire") "PayPal is exercising its contractual right to cease doing business" with ICAN and shut down their account.
