Nearly 5 Million Adverse Events Reported By Pfizer's Own Document

By Aussie17

The numbers were staggering, with 1.6 million adverse events jumping off the page. But guess what? The actual report from Pfizer is even more shocking.

It seems like Daniel may have reported the figures for the report interval, covering the period between December 2021 and June 2022. However, when you dig into the cumulative data from December 2020 to June 2022, the adverse event count skyrockets to almost 5 million. Talk about a jaw-dropping revelation!

If you're curious about the nitty-gritty details, check out the tabulation of Serious and Non-Serious Adverse Events. What you really want to focus on is the "C" column, which represents the cumulative cases from December 2020 to June 2022. This column reveals the serious adverse events, including those categorized as Death, Life Threatening, or resulting in Disability/Permanent Damage.

Here's the link to the tabulation of Serious and Non-Serious Adverse Events. (<https://www.globalresearch.ca/wp-content/uploads/2023/05/pfizer-report.pdf>)

Have a blast reading the report! I wonder if that's why Walensky resigned suddenly. I think she may have received the report a few weeks earlier. The elephant T-Rex in the room has definitely woken up!

It's great to see this news gaining more traction, it is crucial. While many of us have been focused on VAERS over the past two years, it is even more important to shed light on Pfizer's 393 pages of Adverse Events. Allow me to explain why through a Q&A format.

Before we proceed, I want to mention a caveat: I am not a Pharmacovigilance ("PV") expert. Therefore, most of what I'm about to share is based on my interactions with former PV colleagues.

Is this VAERS Data?

No, this is not VAERS.

So, what is the difference between this and VAERS?

VAERS is a U.S.-based system used for capturing Vaccine Adverse Events. It allows individuals, healthcare providers, and vaccine manufacturers to report any adverse events that occur following vaccination. However, it is important to note that VAERS is not a verified system.

Due to its unverified nature, CDC Director Rochelle Walensky has stated that VAERS may have an over-reporting of adverse events. She mentioned that examples like "people getting hit by a truck" are included in VAERS, highlighting the range of reports it collects.

On the other hand, pharmaceutical companies employ robust pharmacovigilance systems to capture adverse events associated with their products. These systems involve a more comprehensive and thorough process of data collection, assessment, and verification.

In essence, internal Adverse Event data is verified. This means that whenever they receive a report, there is someone internally verifying the accuracy of the data. In some cases, they may reach out to the patient or doctor to gather additional information (for example, if the batch number was omitted or if the Adverse Event was not described clearly).

Is this 393-page Adverse Event underreported?

In my opinion, yes. It shares similarities with the underreporting issues seen in VAERS. However, there are also systematic methods employed by Big Pharma to deliberately underreport Adverse Events.

Is the 393-page Adverse Event document confidential? Was it leaked?

There is some nuance to the answer. Allow me to explain in simpler terms.

In highly regulated industries like the pharmaceutical sector, document management follows a meticulous and labor-intensive process. Unlike simply opening Microsoft Word and typing away, creating a new document in Pharma involves setting various metadata associated with it.

One important aspect is the document classification, which may include options like

- Public
- Restricted
- Private
- Confidential
- Secret.

Each classification has specific rules attached to it. "Public" documents, such as Annual Reports, are accessible to everyone. "Restricted" documents may be limited to employees and contractors/suppliers. "Private" documents may be restricted to employees only. "Confidential" documents may be available to custom-defined groups, such as regulators. The release of these documents to the public is typically determined by regulators, and acquiring them may involve additional processes like Freedom of Information (FOI) requests. It's important to note that "Confidential" does not necessarily mean leaked; it often means the document is subject to certain restrictions.

The documentation systems in place are complex, they give me nightmares up to this day. "Documentum" is commonly used in the big pharma I worked with, and tech geeks may have more insights about it.

Anyway, thanks to Twitter, I recently became aware that an earlier version of this document (based on April 2022 updates) was available. Surprisingly, the news didn't cover it extensively, and Senator Rennick suggested that it was heavily censored. However, Senator Rennick obtained it through a Freedom of Information request.

What are Spontaneous vs Non-Spontaneous AEs?

Spontaneous adverse events occur when individuals independently report negative reactions to drugs. On the other hand, non-spontaneous adverse events are identified through meticulous studies, such as clinical trials, or through monitoring conducted by researchers or drug companies.

Regarding the 5 million adverse events, how many doses of Pfizer's mRNA vaccine were administered in relation to these cases?

2,693,922,584 administered doses. (<https://tkp.at/wp-content/uploads/2023/03/3.PSUR-1.pdf>)

To put this into perspective, there have been 4,964,106 adverse events reported, indicating a 0.184% chance of an adverse event for every administered dose. This means approximately 1 adverse event occurs for every 543 doses administered!

Now, using Senator Rennick's numbers from the April 2022 update, I calculated the ratio of Serious AEs to Non-serious AEs.

With 28.8% serious AEs, it appears that we are observing 1 Serious Adverse Event for every 1887 doses administered.

This is above Fraiman's paper (1 in 800 serious adverse events), maybe it could be explained by the underreporting.

1 in 2000 doses for every SAE is still a very bad ratio!

Perhaps someone else can verify these figures. Let's pass the baton to Jessica Rose, who meticulously tabulated the data from the 393 pages and organized it in an Excel spreadsheet! (<https://jessicar.substack.com/p/pfizer-appendix-22-document-compared>)

In other news...

Kevin McKernan recently presented evidence of DNA contamination to the FDA. You can watch the video for more details at https://twitter.com/_aussie17/status/1669453756675821569

I believe this is a significant issue, as it involves an Out of Spec situation. Both the FDA and Pfizer are aware of it, and now it has been officially documented. Multiple laboratories across the globe have replicated Kevin's findings, which further validates the concerns. An immediate investigation followed by a product recall is necessary.

See Daniel Horowitz's report here \(conservativereview.com/horowitz-confidential-pfizer-document-shows-the-company-observed-1-6-million-adverse-events-covering-nearly-every-organ-system-2661316948.html\)

Bill C-18 is Accomplishing Exactly What The Liberals Wanted:

Weakening The Free Flow of Information in Canada

By Spencer Fernando

Why would the Liberals be given the benefit of the doubt — yet another appeal to incompetence — when C-18 represents an obvious continuation of their efforts to narrow the realm of discussion and debate in this country?

In a move that should surprise nobody — given the fact that Meta promised to take this exact action if Bill C-18 passed — the company is ending news sharing on Facebook and Instagram in Canada. Here’s their full announcement:

“Today, we are confirming that news availability will be ended on Facebook and Instagram for all users in Canada prior to the Online News Act (Bill C-18) taking effect.

We have repeatedly shared that in order to comply with Bill C-18, passed today in Parliament, content from news outlets, including news publishers and broadcasters, will no longer be available to people accessing our platforms in Canada.

Earlier this month, we announced that we were conducting product tests to help us build an effective product solution to end news availability as a result of C-18. These tests are ongoing and currently impact a small percentage of users in Canada.

The changes affecting news content will not otherwise impact Meta’s products and services in Canada. We want to assure the millions of Canadians on our platforms that they will always be able to connect with friends and family, grow their businesses and support their local communities.

We will continue to combat misinformation and have built the largest global fact-checking network of any platform by partnering with more than 90 independent fact-checking organisations around the world who review and rate viral misinformation in more than 60 languages globally. Fact-checking will continue with respect to content that remains available in Canada.”

If the Liberal government claims they are surprised by this action, they are lying. Here’s what Meta said on June 1st of 2023:

“As we have shared, content from news outlets, including news publishers and broadcasters, will not be available to people accessing Facebook and Instagram in Canada if Bill C-18, the Online News Act, is passed into law. As we prepare to comply with the legislation, we are announcing today that we will begin tests on both platforms that will limit some users and publishers from viewing or sharing some news content in Canada.”

The disastrous Online News Act

The Liberals claim the Online News Act is about making ‘the big social media companies’ pay for content they are supposedly ‘stealing’ from publishers. To put it politely, that is a patently absurd notion.

When someone posts a link on Facebook, nothing is being stolen. The platform to share the link wouldn’t exist without Facebook having provided it. Facebook doesn’t charge publishers for the provision of the platform. Posting on the platform brings more traffic — and thus more revenue — to those who use it.

To claim that any part of that process is ‘stealing’ is simply false.

So, what is the Online News Act really about?

First and foremost, it’s about the fact that online social media platforms have made it easier for Canadians to question the government and share information. It reduces the power of the government, because even when the government bails out media outlets, independent outlets can still thrive on social media. This creates an avenue for Canadians to — if they choose — bypass government narratives.

Now, an honest government should actually support this. A government that believes in freedom of speech, and believes in true ‘Liberal Democratic’ values as we once understood them would be happy to see a proliferation of media outlets and perspectives thriving online. While there are obvious downsides to this — the ability for extreme groups and vile incompetent.

Yet, the warnings of what would happen if they passed C-18 without changes were so clear, and the end of news sharing on Facebook in Canada fits so well into the long-term goals of the Liberals that the incompetence defence doesn’t hold up.

This is what they wanted.

They either would have gotten Meta to ‘back down’ (which would have played well in Quebec), or they would have weakened the independent outlets that have been galvanizing opposition to their actions. It’s a win-win for the Liberals.

But of course, the rest of us lose out here.

Canada is now an outlier among most democratic nations with our access to news on a major platform — part of the essential digital public square — has been seriously constrained. The federal government doesn’t get an ‘incompetence’ pass on this one. They have shown their hostility to free expression and the free flow of information time and time again.

If we want to preserve our liberty and our democratic way of life, we must speak out against this legislation and support the independent outlets that could be most impacted.

I encourage you to contact your MP and the Senators in your province and encourage them to pressure the government to make the necessary changes to C-18 (such as removing the demand of payment for links). And, if you are able, I encourage you to make a financial contribution to this website. It is essential that we don’t allow the Liberals to get away with their efforts to weaken those voices who hold them accountable.

Originally published at spencerfernando.com opinions to be more easily shared — those downsides are outweighed by the fact that information flows much more freely because of social media, and because more discussion — rather than less discussion — is how we arrive at the truth over time.

But for a government that has a penchant for lying — like the Liberal government does — the free flow of information is seen as a threat to their political power.

Thus, by driving Meta to end news sharing in Canada, C-18 achieves the Liberal government goal of narrowing the bounds of free speech. It will also weaken many independent news outlets, and weaken establishment outlets. But, since the Liberals are throwing money at established outlets, this results in a net gain of power for outlets dependent on government money and a net loss of power for independent media — exactly what the Liberals want.

While some Liberals are celebrating, this is not a good day for our country, a point well-made by Michael Geist:

“Seeing some suggest that somehow Facebook blocking news sharing due to Bill C-18 is a good thing. It’s not. It will disproportionately hurt smaller and independent media outlets and leave the field to poorer quality sources. Worst of all: it was totally predictable and avoidable.”

Incompetence again?

Pablo Rodriguez — minister of Canadian Heritage — is feigning ignorance, as if this is all a big surprise:

“Facebook knows very well that they have no obligations under the act right now. Following Royal Assent of Bill #C18, the Government will engage in a regulatory and implementation process.

If the Government can’t stand up for Canadians against tech giants, who will?”

This all sounds like the defence the Liberals have used to justify their repeated failings on national security and China’s election interference. They want you to believe that they couldn’t have done anything wrong on purpose, and that they are just

Truth Catching Up with the Lie?

By Octavius R.

A recently released Cleveland Clinic study involving 48,344 of their working-age healthcare employees, is being touted as proof positive that the more vaccinated a person was, the more likely they were to become infected with Covid-19. The yet-to-be-peer-reviewed study entitled “Risk of Coronavirus Disease 2019 (Covid-19) among those up-to-date and not-up-to-date on Covid-19 Vaccination”, can be found here: (news-medical.net/news/20230614/Being-not-up-to-date-on-COVID-19-vaccination-linked-to-lower-risk-of-Infection-study-suggests.aspx)

The 100 days-long study, authored by Shreshta, Burke et al, of the Department of Infectious Diseases at Cleveland Clinic, notes that, “The CDC recently defined being up-to-date” on Covid-19 vaccination as having received at least one dose of a Covid-19 bivalent vaccine. The authors note that, “The purpose of this study was to compare the risk of Covid-19 among those up-to-date and not up-to-date on Covid-19 vaccination”. In a nutshell, the Ohio-based Cleveland Clinic researchers decided to test whether the CDC guidance made any sense. Spoiler alert. It did not end well for the CDC.

In its summary, the study notes that among 48,344 working age Cleveland Clinic employees, those not “up-to-date” (according to the official CDC definition) had a lower risk of getting sick with Covid than those employees who were “up-to-date”. According to the study’s authors, “The current CDC definition provides a meaningless classification of risk of Covid-19 in the adult population”.

The “not up-to-date” employees Hazard ratio was 0.77- that means they were 23% less likely to get infected compared to those “up-to date” employees. This difference is recognized as statistically significant and cannot be ignored. Also recall that government’s worldwide promoted the so-called as supposed to greatly protect those who got it and greatly reduce their chances of being infected and dying of it.

To reiterate, the purpose of this study was to evaluate whether individuals who were not “up to date” on the Covid-19 vaccines had a higher risk of Covid-19 than those who were “up-to-date”. The conclusion was that there was 23% less risk of catching Covid-19 for those employees not totally vaccinated (according to the CDC definition).

This study is interesting for another important reason. It seems to represent the first time “mainstream” researchers are directly and pointedly questioning the CDC’s logic and decision making process.

Some key quotes/takeaways from the researcher’s summary are worth reprinting here:

“Given the lack of efficacy of the bivalent vaccine against the XBB variants, which are the predominant circulating strains at this time, it is reasonable to question whether individuals being “up-to-date” with a vaccine of questionable effectiveness are in fact protected against C19 as compared to those who are not “up-to-date.”

“The study’s findings question the wisdom of promoting the idea that every person needs to be up-to-date on C19 vaccination, as currently defined at this time. It is often stated that the primary purpose of covid vaccination is to prevent serious covid19 and death... it should be pointed out that there is not a single study that has shown that C19 bivalent vaccine protects against severe disease of death caused by the Omicron variant. At least one prior study has failed to find a protective effect of the bivalent vaccine against SARS Cov2. People may still choose to get the vaccine, but an assumption that the vaccine protects against severe disease and death is not reason enough to unconditionally push a vaccine of questionable effectiveness in all adults.”

“This study found that not being up-to-date on C19 vaccination by the CDC definition was associated with a lower risk of C19 than being up-to-date. This study also demonstrates the folly of risk calculation based solely on receipt of a vaccine of questionable effectiveness while ignoring protection provided by prior infection.”

In these days of open censorship, it will be interesting to see whether that open admonishment aimed at the CDC, to maintain the long-held scientific truth that acquired immunity derives from prior infection, makes it through the “review” process.

If it does, could it mean the façade is beginning to truly crumble?

Health Canada is Strangling Natural Health Products in Red Tape

By Canadian Health Food Association

Editor’s Note: The National Health Products Protection Association has an important discussion paper and podcast about this on their website. You can find them at nhppa.org

In Canada, Natural Health Products (NHPs) are regulated by the Natural and Non-Prescription Health Products Directorate (NNHPD) under the Natural Health Products Regulations (NHPR). These regulations came into effect in 2004. The regulations were developed following extensive consultations, they reflected the desire of Canadians for a regulatory framework appropriate to the level of risk associated with NHPs. Almost 20 years later, Canada is still the only country that has a dedicated set of regulations governing NHPs.

All NHPs must be approved by Health Canada before they are legally allowed to be sold in Canada. Always look for a Natural Product Number (NPN) or Homeopathic Medicine Number (DIN-HM) on the product label. Canadians should feel confident that the products they use are safe, effective, and high-quality.

On July 6, 2022, Health Canada published new labelling requirements under the Natural Health Products Regulations (NHPR) that are set to come into practice in 2025. The intention is to ensure label information is presented in a legible and comprehensive manner – this is to reduce confusion, medical errors, product interactions and to allow consumers to locate information about safe use. All current NHP labelling requirements continue to apply, specifically what is required on the principal display panel (PDP) of a label.

Unfortunately, Government did not consider industry feedback on these changes, conduct user testing or consult labelling sciences to ensure the changes would indeed result in a clearer, more consumer-friendly label. What they did create was a very technical and inflexible guidance document that is difficult for brands to comply with.

We launched an Economic Impact Study to find out how this would impact our industry – we found:

76% of brands say there is a high/very high chance they will need to pull product from the market as a result of these regulations.

1 in 5 companies say they are seriously considering leaving the Canadian market. Exciting new products and international brands will likely not come to Canada because the regulatory burden will be too severe.

66% of companies said it would have a negative impact on employment.

We put the new requirements into practice to see how these changes will impact labels. The new requirements do not present the information in a more legible and comprehensive manner as they were intended to – but actually create a more confusing label that will negatively impact profit margins, cause packaging sizes to double, and beyond current supply chain challenges, further limit product availability while hurting competition, innovation, and new product offerings.

Cost Recovery is the process of collecting user fees for services (like the cost for renewing your drivers license or passport). For NHPs cost recovery is proposed to include fees for regulatory activities such as product evaluation, site licenses and annual renewal fees.

With the establishment of the Natural Health Product Regulations in 2004, NHPs have not been subject to cost recovery. We understand cost recovery is a necessary part of doing business in Canada however, any cost recovery efforts should be phased over multiple years and be based on accurate data reflecting the current NHP sector which is mostly comprised of small/mid-sized companies and include measurable service standards.

Currently, the foundation of our regulatory system is stretched to the brink with massive backlogs in product applications. In short, data used to establish this current program is dramatically flawed and the proposed fees will financially decimate the NHP industry in Canada.

The timing of implementing this program at the same time as new labelling requirements will financially decimate many companies in our industry, making it extremely challenging for them to stay viable. These regulatory changes are unfair, unrealistic, and so costly they will force many small to medium-sized businesses to shut down Canadian operations.

Canada is a Crime Scene

Canada is Also an Active War Zone

By Daniel Oke

Before you attempt to challenge what we are outlining, we challenge you to thoroughly review the evidence for yourself prior to passing judgment. (links are included throughout the article)

In the spirit of truth and out of duty of care, we offer the following update on the reality of our current situation in the country/corporation commonly referred to as “Canada”. We have been warning people for the past 3 years; what they think has happened and what really happened are two very different things. After intense research and monitoring of the data and evidence, there are some things that everyone needs to know, especially if they were injected with the bioweapon (karenkingston.substack.com/p/by-calling-mrna-injections-covid-5dd), which was presented as a “safe and effective vaccine”. Everyone knows by now that the narrative was false in that no immunity was conferred, nor was there any mitigation of transmission by receiving the experimental injections. However, it goes much deeper and we encourage all to read this with an open mind and an active heart.

The evidence now shows that all Covid related mandates were based on faulty modeling and not founded on any real science. The masks, tests, injections and lockdown measures were all based on hype and political propaganda. This was in conjunction with the withholding of natural/effective therapeutic treatments that they knew would work (canadian-covidcarealliance.org/category/prevention-treatment/early-treatment). This, in and of itself, is criminal enough to prosecute and shut down everyone involved. Out of duty of care for your friends and family, it is important to know that this whole agenda was born of warfare. This is not opinion nor conjecture, as we have all of the evidence (e.g., contracts both military and civil, the actual Pfizer documents that show that they knew that serious damage would be caused by their untested, gene-editing nanotechnology) (karenkingston.substack.com/p/fos-un-pharma-conducted-human-safety).

It’s all in the patents, real-time metadata and much more: (prosecutenow.io)

The bottom line is that there has been a gross breach of trust and criminal negligence by medical regulatory bodies, the shameful police services who have turned a blind eye to the evidence presented as well as the politicians. The list of complicit perpetrators goes on and on. When all of the structures in society are contaminated with conflicts of interest, including the judiciary, there is only a military way left to us for resolution (The Law of War Manual) to find justice and protection from the corporate de facto government crime syndicate that is functioning outside the democratic process. The ongoing scandals of the Trudeau government are being exposed on a nearly daily basis: e.g., the Trudeau Foundation, China election interference and the privy council cover-up of the actual vaccine injuries that are taking place, the recent false flag wildfire rampage (which is intended to push a climate change agenda), and the continual attack on the children and families with what is being pushed in schools as “education”.

Enough is enough! This has to come to a complete stop by having the complicit perpetrators identified in their genocidal medical deception and their act of democide revealed. The only solution to this madness is having the military step in and local community members take action, following the rule of law, the law of treaties and the Law of War Manual. When people come to understand what is really happening and why pertaining to the W.H.O., W.H.A., N.A.T.O., W.E.F., the Globalist Digital ID Charter, C.B.D.C. digital currency, along with the COVID and climate change agendas, will see that the objective is to dissolve our sovereignty as individuals and as a nation. One can see why urgent action is needed to be taken by all! “All it takes for evil to win is for good people to do nothing.”

Through the Law of War Manual (documentcloud.org/documents/2997317-DoD-Law-of-War-Manual-June-2015-Updated-May-2016) we have the ability to seek a truce with the combatants, i.e., the Liberal crime syndicate/privy council, where we present a peace treaty declaration with terms that include the opportunity for their redemption, and subsequently a demand that they pay restitution/reparations for the bioweapons and unlawful mandated Covid measures (ie business/school closures). The treaty will include the concept of restorative justice, in that restitution paid will assist in the repair of the damages done on a local level and be implemented by the actual victims in their own communities (not by any level of the contaminated “government” bodies). Included will be a 12-step demand plan, “Everyone knows by now that the narrative was false”...

org/documents/2997317-DoD-Law-of-War-Manual-June-2015-Updated-May-2016) we have the ability to seek a truce with the combatants, i.e., the Liberal crime syndicate/privy council, where we present a peace treaty declaration with terms that include the opportunity for their redemption, and subsequently a demand that they pay restitution/reparations for the bioweapons and unlawful mandated Covid measures (ie business/school closures). Included will be a 12-step demand plan, which is being used by several counties in the United States right now, to totally halt and remove any mRNA devices (ie the “COVID” injections) completely from the communities. This treaty declaration will be presented to the parliament to act as the negotiator with the perpetrators on our behalf.

Therefore, if you want to include your COVID damages reparation list (i.e., the harm/loss/trespass you’ve endured since 2020) and vaccine injury/crime report, it will be added to the list of those who have already done so. You can submit your list(s) to lakeshore.sovereignassembly@gmail.com under the subject heading “My Treaty List”.

There is nothing that can be shown now to justify the measures taken in the last 3 years, in fact the evidence and data now show that the COVID agenda was a pre-meditated medical deception to achieve the globalist goals and power and control (plandemicseries.com/plandemic-2-indoctornation). This travesty was not borne of a naturally occurring virus; it was the multi-year pre-meditated plan to change life as we know it, literally and figuratively, via changing through trans-humanism (karenkingston.substack.com/p/part-10-mrna-technology-was-invented) what it means to be human. The result of this plan is to ultimately take away the hope of any freedom for future generations and totally eliminate our unalienable rights and inherent freedoms. This tyrannical agenda puts those rights and freedoms at extreme risk.

Again, before you attempt to challenge what we are outlining, we challenge you to thoroughly review the evidence for yourself prior to passing judgment. Your family’s future depends on it, as does the next generations to follow... if they make it that far (rumble.com/v2oxmfc-dr-chris-shoemaker-discusses-the-vaccines-and-their-safety-and-efficacy-ott.html).

We are, as a nation, actually at war by supporting the Ukraine Deep-state agenda and the statistical impossibility of all-cause mortality that is occurring all around the world (youtube.com/watch?v=95T2Bqht4Xg). The Liberal crime syndicate works outside of the democratic process, with directions coming from the privy council. This has led to an act of domestic terrorism that is pre-meditated in nature against the people.

Yes, we are at war with our own illegitimate, de facto government and the military is the only way and our remedy is found in the Law of War Manual with the peace treaty declaration where the parliament is actually required to work for the best interest of the people who have been attacked by the insidious crimes.

We encourage you, individually, to participate as well as any groups or Private Members Associations who wish to take the same approach.

You can submit your list(s) to lakeshore.sovereignassembly@gmail.com under the subject heading “My Treaty List” if you wish to add your information to the Lakeshore Sovereign Assembly peace treaty declaration.

Good News Tidbits

- Federal government moves to delay MAID for people suffering solely from mental illness.
- A Texas-based federal judge has mandated that the FDA must disclose all data pertaining to the COVID-19 vaccines from Pfizer for the 12-15 age group, as well as Moderna for adults. This notable judicial directive is associated with a lawsuit initiated by parents whose child suffered adverse reactions following the COVID-19 shot. The judge highlighted transparency as critical in his directive, stating “Democracy dies behind closed doors.” The FDA’s initial proposal suggested a ~23.5-year timeline for the data release while the judge’s mandate calls for a complete data disclosure by June 2025. This is the second time a federal judge has ordered the FDA to expedite its COVID-19 vaccine data release.
- The WHO finally recommends against using non-sugar substitutes, including aspartame. As outlined by Dr. Russell Blaylock, an expert in the field, there are over 500 studies that clearly identify aspartame as being one of the most dangerous yet widely available substances, linked to a whopping 75% of the adverse reactions to food additives as reported to the FDA.
- After the public voiced suspicions of arson and an RCMP news release reported that police believe some fires were “intentionally set,” the Alberta government has finally announced that it will hire outside arson investigators.
- Meta, which owns Facebook and Instagram, announced on June 16th that it will be scaling back its controversial and damaging COVID-19 misinformation policy in the coming weeks. Meta CEO Mark Zuckerberg also admitted that Facebook’s censorship policies censored truthful information and undermined credibility in institutions. As he put it, “it really undermines trust.”
- In the heat of censorship pleas from the Malaysian and Brazilian governments, the app Telegram has announced it will not participate in political censorship and will not cooperate with any government to take down political content.

Climate Change or Climate Terrorism?

By John Carter

Normally at this hour I'd be at the gym. This morning, however, I woke up to the smell of wood smoke a sky that looks like this: (see barsoom.substack.com/p/canada-burning)

The air quality is noticeably terrible, and it doesn't much feel like a great time for devotions in the iron temple.

There are currently over 100 fires raging throughout Quebec and, now, Ontario. The number goes up every time I go to check Google, last I saw was around 160. The closest is just over 100 km from here.

Wildfires on this scale, at this point in the year, are in my experience unprecedented. Ten of thousands of people in outlying communities have already been evacuated. So far about 3.5 million hectares have burned.

As you can see, not only are we on track for the worst wildfire season on record, the temporal pattern is completely out of step with what we normally see. In every other year, wildfire season is mid-August, mid-July at the earliest. The beginning of June is unheard of.

The usual suspects are blaming this on, of course, the climate emergency crisis catastrophe. Carbon dioxide concentrations have finally gotten out of hand, the tipping point has been reached, and Canada is burning as a result. Cue Greta, waving her hands in the air like the Ron Paul meme — It's HAPPENING! You should have eaten the bugs, damn you. A cricket a day keeps the wrath of Earth Mammy at bay.

Only, that would be quite the remarkably rapid transition. As you can see in the graph, last year was a quiet year for wildfires. The year before was high, but followed the expected seasonal pattern. The year before that there were almost no wildfires to speak of. I don't see much of a pattern there, personally. Granted, not every system in nature evolves smoothly and monotonically. Many systems undergo abrupt phase transitions.

Still, if that were the case, you'd expect the last month or so to have been both unseasonably warm and dry compared to historical averages. Certainly where I am, nothing has felt particularly out of the ordinary — we had a warm week or so at the end of May, and while it hasn't rained much in the last two weeks it rained plenty before that. That said, it was something of a dry winter, and a bad wildfire season was expected out in the Rockies due to the lack of precipitation.

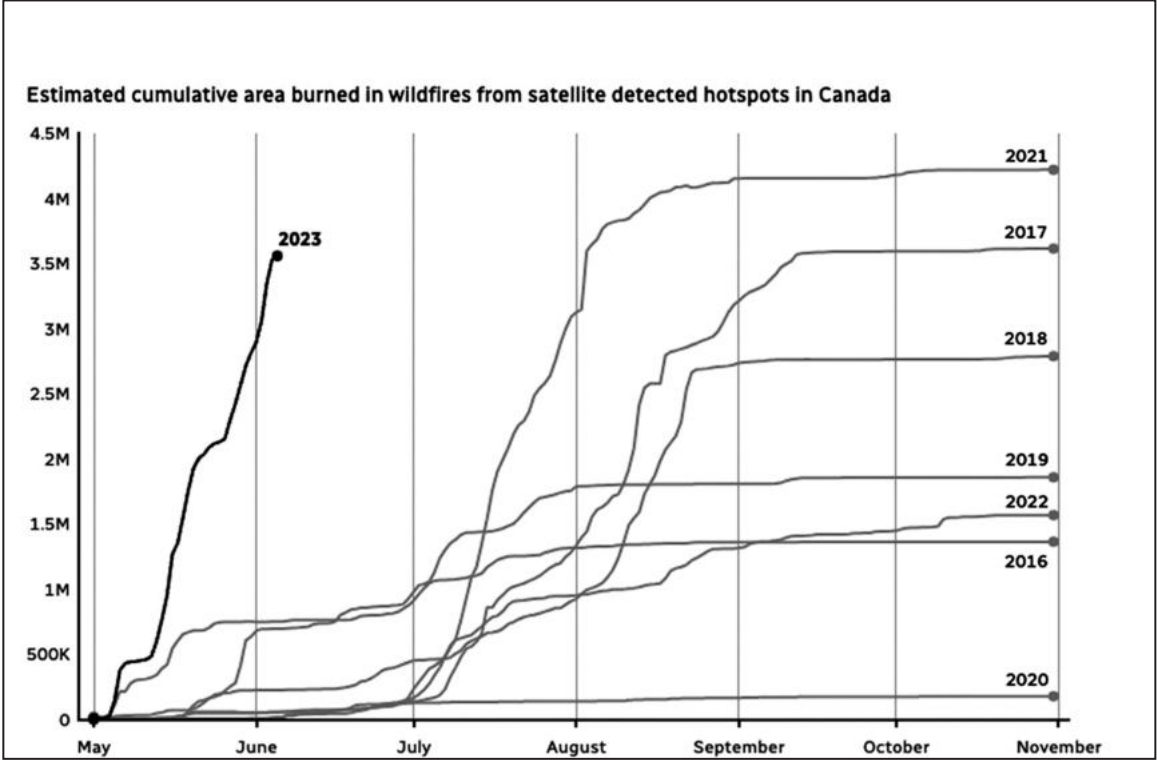

But then there's this satellite footage, which has been getting shared around: (tiktok.com/@oboyosavage/video/7241197965019385134)

It really is an amazing coincidence that all of those fires would start at more or less the same time. Perhaps if there had been an epic lightning storm blanketing the area, which there wasn't. Or maybe a particularly large shower of meteors, although a cosmic impactor swarm large enough to set fire to the country would presumably have been seen by a lot of people, and there are only 2 reports for 2023 from the whole of Canada, with the most recent being out in Alberta.

The only other way I can imagine that you'd have that many fires starting with such perfect synchronization is via coordinated human activity. If you go on social media, the other narrative vying for supremacy with the climate crisis shrieking is that this is mostly deliberate arson. Yes, that's a crazy conspiracy theory. It's one that at least some police share, however, with local news in British Columbia, Alberta and Nova Scotia reporting arrests or active investigations of suspicious activity. The Alberta government has assigned just under half of the wildfires to human activity, with the rest under investigation.

Wildfire arson isn't exactly unknown. I've seen reports in previous years of people setting fires in order to get jobs fighting the fires. And of course, not every human-initiated wildfire is deliberate. Accidents from unattended campfires or cigarette butts that weren't quite extinguished are hardly uncommon. But accidental wildfires seem unlikely to yield coordinated fires across such a wide geographical area, and rednecks looking to get summer jobs with the local fire brigade also don't seem like the kind of bad actors that would possess this level of coordination.

That leaves, as far as I can make out, three broad categories of perpetrators: a foreign state actor; the Canadian government itself; or non-state actors.

A foreign state might be motivated by the intention to cause economic damage, but I find this somewhat unlikely. It doesn't really seem like Russia's or China's style. Damaging Canada's softwood lumber trade isn't

Would an eco-terrorist group really be capable of that level of coordination, though? We're talking a minimum of a hundred people going to remote areas and setting fires all at once. Certainly there are well more than a hundred carbon cultists in the world, but there's a big difference between the levels of emotional buy-in that result in 'I should not eat meat' and 'burn 3 million hectares of forest'. There's also the competence question. As a rule, fanaticism and professionalism are inversely correlated. Not always, but the combination of ability and zealotry is fairly rare.

State actors tend to be much more capable of coordinated atrocity on a mass scale. Since I can't really see what any of Canada's adversaries would have to gain from this, that narrows it down to Canada itself. Canada's national government is of course in the hands of precisely the same sorts of idiopathic maniacs that populate the Extinction Rebellion. They're already pushed through a carbon tax, they're moving to start imposing agriculturally ruinous nitrogen caps, they're fully on board with the EV and renewables. But Trudeau's Liberals have also been getting increasing pushback, both in Parliament, and from the population at large. More people are rolling their eyes at climate catastrophizing than ever before, not only in Canada but throughout the Western world.

So why not give things a little boost? Remind people of how dire the situation is. The psychological impact of a wildfire season unprecedented in size and scope, darkening the skies with a yellow haze all the way down into the American East coast, is already providing rhetorical fuel for the regime media to caterwaul about carbon emissions, and not only in Canada. I've been seeing accounts all down the East Coast noting the haze and commenting on the wildfires. I wouldn't be surprised if European media picks this story up as fodder for the climate propaganda ... which, given how badly the European economy is doing due to the self-imposed hobbling of "renewable" energy policies, nuclear shutdowns, and Russian sanctions, is increasingly being tuned out even in Germany. WEF types like Trudeau and his cabinet coordinate their actions with their counterparts abroad, so it wouldn't surprise me all that much if the arson campaign is intended as part of a pre-planned media blitz. Time will tell.

I want to finish by emphasizing that neither I nor anyone else I know has any proof that these wildfires are caused by arson, or if so that this arson is the result of self-inflicted damage by the Canadian state. That is all pure speculation based on the highly anomalous behaviour of the wildfires (a large number starting more or less simultaneously two months earlier than normal), along with the known policy vectors of the current ruling class, and the demonstrated tendency of that ruling class to 'make their own reality', so to speak. This is the same ruling class, remember, that blew up the NordStream pipeline and then pretended Russia did it. They're not above committing acts of terrorism on a vast scale if they think it will benefit them. With the reputation they've made for themselves, it's easy for many of us - certainly for me - to believe that they would do something like set an entire country on fire purely to spook the populace, and that is perhaps the grimmest comment possible on the times in which we live.

Originally published at barsoom.substack.com likely to result in any particular strategic advantage for them.

An obvious candidate for a non-state actor would be an eco-terrorist group. Extinction Rebellion types, for example, might easily have concluded that Canada and other Western governments are not acting fast enough to shut down human activity and break the planet's fever. So why not give people a good scare? Set a bunch of fires and blame it on Huitzilocarbon. It's the sort of little white lie that zealots of their type can easily excuse to themselves.

Ravaging Earth and Her Populations

By Susan Fletcher

Now in California, wildfires in Canada and northern Siberia — ‘climate change’ isn’t doing that, geoengineering is!

US Military weather modification operations began over 75 years ago. Dr. Gordon J.F. MacDonald, a member of President Johnson’s Science Advisory Committee, predicted four planetary weapons by the 21st century: climate modification, earthquake generation (think Turkey and Syria), tsunami generation and direction, and mass behaviour control via electromagnetic manipulation of the atmosphere.

In 1996, Dr. Rosalie Bertell published ‘Background on HAARP’ describing Dr. Bernard Eastland’s US High-Frequency Active Auroral Research Project as follows: “It would be rash to assume that HAARP is an isolated experiment which would not be expanded. It is related to fifty years of intensive and increasingly destructive programs to understand and control the upper atmosphere. In 2000, Dr. Bertell told The Times of London, “US military scientists ... are working on weather systems as a potential weapon. The methods include the enhancing of storms and the diverting of vapour rivers in the Earth’s atmosphere to produce targeted droughts or floods.”Dr. Nick Begich, co-author of ‘Angels Don’t Play This HAARP’, quoted Secretary of Defense, William S. Cohen’s 1997 statement, “Others are engaging even in an eco-type of terrorism whereby they can alter the climate, set off earthquakes, volcanoes remotely through the use of electromagnetic waves.” HAARP is an ionospheric heater in Alaska. Hundreds of similar facilities have been installed around the world to set off not only earthquakes and volcanoes but also hurricanes (i.e. Fiona in 2022), tsunamis, floods and droughts.

In a recent video on Dane Wigington’s geoengineeringwatch.org, Robert F. Kennedy Jr. informs us that Bill Gates is funding geoengineering all over the world. In the same video, Wigington discusses chemtrails which contain particulate matter, the most significant of which is Aluminum. He tells us that tens of millions of aluminum nanoparticles are released annually with the object of blocking some of the sun’s incoming energy. He’s also talked about clouds releasing showers of plastic and the widespread presence of pathogens in our skies.

Then there’s Space Fence, a massive planetary space surveillance system of the US military which started operating in 2020. It was conceived in the 1980s under President Reagan. At that time, it was named Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) and was given the nickname ‘Star Wars’. Purportedly it’s used to track artificial satellites and space debris, but it’s designed to operate in Low Earth Orbit. In fact, it can do much more than that. The surveillance capability of Space Fence includes everything on Earth postage stamp size or larger. It’s designed to be run by Artificial Intelligence (AI) and to interact with cell phone towers, Gwen towers, Nexrad towers, metal particulates and more. Gwen (Ground Wave Emergency Network) towers were erected through the 1980s and early 1990s across the USA. They had 350-foot copper wires that fanned out at their bases underground and could give off enormous bursts of energy. Because they hugged the ground, it was thought they lished two books of what will be a Trilogy, the first published in 2014 titled ‘Chemtrails, Haarp & The Full Spectrum Dominance of Planet Earth’ and the second titled ‘Under An Ionized Sky: From Chemtrails to Space Fence Lockdown’. The third book will be titled ‘Synthetic Biology and Transhumanism’.

Freeland thinks Space Fence will eventually develop into a conductive Saturnian ring around the Earth’s equator. If that comes to fruition, it could allow the Military-Industrial Complex to lock down planetary communications, including our DNA’s electrical communications. Freeland states that Space Fence could completely transform Earth’s environment and facilitate the AI/Transhumanist agenda to merge man into machine. A huge resource for information on Space Fence, geoengineered transhumanism, directed energy weapons, and Morgellons among other topics is her website, www.ElanaFreeland.com.

So what about ‘Climate Change’? Mark Keenan, a former scientist at the Department of Energy and Climate Change, UK; has this to say: “The word “sustainable” was hijacked decades ago, and it is now deceptively used to advance the agendas of globalist mega-corporate interests who couldn’t care less about the environment. The aim is to catapult humanity into the arms of UN Agenda 2030 and the WEF ‘reset’ plan, which are clever marketing plans entirely designed by the so-called elite mega-corporate interests of the WEF Davos group.” In fact, as of February 2023, 1500 of the world’s leading climate scientists and professionals in over 30 countries have signed a declaration that there is no climate emergency and have refuted the United Nations’ claims about man-made climate change.

Elana Freeland has said that survival skills have to do with our consciousness which is extremely effective if we have enough of it. She believes that consciousness preceded matter and has the generative power to move in matter and change it.

Study Links Covid Vaccinations to Excess Deaths

By Tea Lynn Moore

The most comprehensive study done on the mortality rate of the COVID-19 vaccine was just released. The German study published in Cureus Springer Nature titled “Estimation of Excess Mortality in Germany During 2020-2022 (Kuhbandner et al.)” finds a strong correlation between the increase in mortality rates within the country and the introduction of COVID-19 vaccines. The results, based on a state-of-the-art method of actuarial science, speak for themselves:

“The results show that the observed number of deaths in 2020 was close to the expected number with respect to the empirical standard deviation... By contrast, in 2021, the observed number of deaths was two empirical standard deviations above the expected number and even more than four times the empirical standard deviation in 2022.”

Furthermore, the study found that excess mortality shot up highest in younger people. The authors noted that the highest excess mortality started to accumulate only from April 2021 onward. Additionally, the authors noted that typically, “excess mortality is higher in older people and is completely absent in the age groups below 30

How Much Energy Will the World Need?

By Mark Mills

We're headed toward an exciting all-renewable energy future. Wind and solar will power the world of tomorrow. And tomorrow isn't far off! It's time to wake up. You're having a dream. Here's the reality.

Oil, natural gas, and coal provide 84% of all the world's energy. That's down just two percentage points from twenty years ago. And oil still powers nearly 97% of all global transportation.

Contrary to headlines claiming that we're rapidly transitioning away from fossil fuels, it's just not happening. Two decades and five trillion dollars of governments "investing" in green energy and we've barely moved the needle.

This was supposed to be easy. Why is it so hard?

In a word: rocks. To get the same amount of energy from solar and wind that we now get from fossil fuels, we're going to have to massively increase mining. By more than 1000%. This isn't speculation. This is physics. Copper, iron ore, silicon, nickel, chromium, zinc, cobalt, lithium, graphite, and rare earth metals like neodymium. We need them all. And then those metals and materials have to be turned into motors, turbine blades, solar panels, batteries, and hundreds of other industrial components. That also takes lots of energy, which requires even more mining.

As a World Bank study put it, these green "technologies are in fact significantly more material intensive" than our current energy mix. That may be the understatement of the century: raw materials account for 50-70% of the costs to manufacture both solar panels and batteries. Until now it hasn't really mattered that much because wind and solar still account for only a few percentage points of the global energy supply. They're an applause line for environmentalists—not a major energy player. And it's unlikely they will be in the foreseeable future.

But for the sake of argument, let's say we sharply ramp up mining. Where would these new mines be located? Well, for one, China. That country is today the single largest source for most of our critical energy materials. The United States is not only a minor player but is dependent on imports for 100% of 17 critical minerals. Do we want to give China more political and economic leverage? Europe has made itself dependent on Russia for 40% of its natural gas. How well has that worked out?

Ironically, we have all the minerals we need right here in North America. But good luck trying to get them out of the ground. Proposals to build mines in the United States and, increasingly almost everywhere else, meet fierce opposition if not outright bans. To give just one example, in 2022 the Biden Administration canceled a proposed copper and nickel mine in northern Minnesota. This was after years of delays, navigating a maze of environmental regulations.

Yes, the same environmentalists and green-leaning politicians who tout all the benefits of electric cars are the same people who make mining the materials essential to build those cars—like copper and nickel—all but impossible.

Try to square that circle!

So far, we've only talked about today's energy needs. What about tomorrow's? Future energy demand will be far greater than today's. That's been true for the entire history of civilization. The future will not only have more people but also more innovations. And entrepreneurs have always been better at inventing new ways to use energy than to produce it. It's obvious but worth stating: Before the invention of automobiles, airplanes, pharmaceuticals, or computers, there was no energy needed to power them. And as more people become more prosperous, they'll want the things others already have—from better medical care to vacations to cars.

In America, there are about 80 cars for every 100 citizens. In most of the world, it's about five per hundred citizens. Over 80% of air travel is for personal purposes. That's two billion barrels of oil a year. Hospitals use 250% more energy per square foot than an average commercial building. And the global information infrastructure—the Cloud—already uses twice as much electricity as the entire country of Japan, the world's third-largest economy. The massive data centers at the heart of the Cloud alone consume almost 10 times more electricity than the world's 10 million electric cars. E-commerce has taken off and is propelling record growth in warehouses, increasingly filled with energy-hungry robots. America's truck freight index more than doubled in the past decade to deliver the goods to and from those warehouses.

These are today's known trends. While we can't predict the future, we can predict there'll be more innovation—in robotics, drones, quantum computing, biotechnology. And new industries not yet imagined. All of it will require more energy—a lot more. Fossil fuels, nuclear energy, and yes, renewables will be required.

But if you think we can get it all from wind and solar, dream on.

Covid Vaccinations Lead to Excess Deaths years. This pattern is substantially changing from April 2021 onward at the time when more and more people were vaccinated."

The authors also noted concerns about a lack of oversight by the country's safety regulators: "Given the temporal relationship between the increase in vaccinations and excess mortality, it seems surprising that a respective safety signal has not been detected in the pharmacovigilance by the Paul-Ehrlich-Institut (PEI), which is responsible for the safety monitoring of drugs in Germany. A closer inspection of the methods used by the PEI to monitor possibly deadly side effects of the COVID-19 vaccinations reveals that a flawed safety analysis is used that will not indicate a safety signal even if a vaccine causes extremely large numbers of unexpected deaths."

"As is visible in Figure 8, the obvious hypothesis of a decrease in excess mortality with an increasing number of vaccinated persons is not correct. During periods when many persons were vaccinated, excess mortality seems to have increased more strongly compared to the same periods in the previous pandemic year... it seems also very unlikely that the abrupt increase in mortality in spring 2021 is due to delayed or avoided clinical services, which should lead to much smoother changes or due to side effects of COVID-19 measures. This is more unlikely in the year 2022 when excess mortality increases even further despite a decrease in reported COVID-19 deaths and although clinical care should slowly return to normal."

The authors also noted: "... during the months with a high number of the first, second, and third vaccinations, also a high number of excess deaths was observed. The temporal relationship between the courses of vaccinations and excess deaths is especially pronounced for the third vaccination."

A similar mortality pattern was observed for stillbirths, with an increase of 19.4% in the fourth quarter of the year 2021 compared to previous years.

The study concludes: "Taken together, one would expect that vaccinating large parts of the population should have reduced excess mortality. The contrary is observed: both excess mortality and the number of stillbirths increased with increased vaccinations."

A similar trend can be seen in Canada

Happy Canada Day to All of Us, Its Lawful Shareholders and Co-Owners

By The C.P.U. / PowerShift Team

The real lawful shareholders and co-owners of Canada are all around you: regardless of skin color or religion, they are business owners, public servants, family members, friends, colleagues, retirees, your kids and grandkids, and every Indigenous person! All peoples have the right of self-determination. By virtue of that right they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development.

All peoples may, for their own ends, freely dispose of their natural wealth and resources without prejudice to any obligations arising out of international economic co-operation, based upon the principle of mutual benefit, and international law. In no case may a people be deprived of its own means of subsistence.

The States Parties to the present Covenant, including those having responsibility for the administration of Non-Self-Governing and Trust Territories, shall promote the realization of the right of self-determination, and shall respect that right, in conformity with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations.1

This also goes for self-governing States. Together, we are the proud owners of the biggest and most lucrative business in the country! We could even be entitled to dividends from the exploitation of our natural resources, making sure no one would know poverty or hunger, and everyone could be well taken care of.

In 2023, why can't we rejoice in our wealth and power as a nation?

Generations of politicians have disregarded our collective rights to self-determination and governance, leaving the door wide open for corruption and globalization. Thanks to Canada's obsolete political system – partocracy - and stealth authoritarianism, politicians are not held accountable to the citizens and can prioritize the interests of outsiders who rarely favor other goals except their own financial gains, over the peoples' best interest.2

While a common mistake is to think we have a fair democracy in Canada, the only type of democracy we have is a parliamentary democracy (for parliamentarians only) and the citizens' only role is to vote every four years for representatives promoting temporary policies used for votes with the belief that they will actually be put in place after elections.

What else have the Canadian politicians and legal professionals done in Canada to subvert our rights? They have surreptitiously manipulated the "Rule of Law" into a "Rule by Law" by erasing the history of Constitutional Law and the Rule of Law from the law school curriculums.

What is MISSING from our legal Canadian history? The collective and personal peoples' rights that Canada was to imbed into our Charter of Rights and Freedoms from the Universal Human Rights Declaration has disappeared in a puff of smoke. More precisely, the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, that Canada and the UK both signed onto in 1976 binding both countries, guaranteed us all these rights within the international instruments signed by them.

Here are great examples of how the Rule of Law was manipulated through legal scholar corruption which now leads us to Supreme Court Justice Rule of Law corruption in 2023:

The Origins of Hostility to the Rule of Law in Canadian Academia: A History of Administrativism and Anti-Historicity.3

The International Bar Association: The global assault on Rule of Law. By attacking the independence of the judiciary, populist political leaders around the world are undermining fundamental aspects of democracy and civilised society. If it continues unchecked, the consequences will be devastating. 4

In order to request that our collective civil and political rights be properly recognized, and that we should be respected as the legal shareholders and co-owners of Canada, lawyers would need to be updated on the missing links within the Rule of Law, as well as the principles and history that have purposely denied us all of our legal, lawful rights to rule above government as the collective Head of State. There would be no episodes of Supreme Court Justices or any lower court Justices falsely misleading or contradicting and diminishing lawyers fighting for our rights while following the Rule of Law.

Supreme Court Justices make false comments, which its documents prove otherwise, as we have seen in the latest Supreme Court cases regarding our non-derogable rights such as Freedom of Association and Freedom of Expression. Canadian citizens and Indigenous Peoples need to rise and take proper legal action.

The most infuriating and telling of all is when the Supreme Court of Canada itself perpetrates actions that go against even their own previous precedents in regard to Human rights, such as when the Supreme Court denies leave in COVID-related organ transplant case:

By Ian Burns (June 9, 2023, 3:01 PM EDT) -- Canada's top court will not hear the case of an Alberta woman who was taken off an organ transplant waitlist because she did not want to get a COVID-19 vaccine.5

Annette Lewis' application for leave to appeal the decision dismissing her case was denied by the Supreme Court, June 8. Lewis, who suffers from what the courts have described as an "idiopathic condition" which is progressive and debilitating, was part of a program which made it mandatory that patients receive the vaccine prior to transplantation. Lewis tried to restore her place on the list and sought a declaration that the vaccine requirement violated her Charter right to freedom of conscience, the right to life, liberty and security of the person and the right to equality, arguments which were rejected by the Alberta Court of King's Bench (Lewis v. Alberta Health Services, 2022 ABQB 479) and the Alberta Court of Appeal (Lewis v. Alberta Health Services, 2022 ABCA 359). Both courts found the Charter does not apply to doctors' exercise of clinical judgments.

The 1985 Siracusa Principles were never part of our legal education system. These principles were meant to protect the rights of citizens from government overreach.6 They could positively change the outcome of our human rights cases, and the last three years could have been drastically different from an economic, health and labor perspective. Moreover, all politicians and legislative officials should be required to know the basics of international law binding within our Constitution before creating laws; precisely, in reference to international instruments binding on Canada.7

When it comes to citizens' issues, most legal offices and politicians are in conflicts of interests due to government and corporate contracts, which further limits access to legal counsel.

So, to whom can we turn to for help when our system allows us no political power?

The fact that crucial concepts have been gradually removed or neglected from the curriculum makes it extremely difficult for lawyers and Justices to grasp the severity of the treason done to Canadians and Indigenous Peoples in Canada since 1931.

Future generations of lawyers should be taught the true impact on Canadian law, of our fundamental international human rights, laws, principles, and treaties and how they are to be respected. These are the rights that the WHO, ILO, NATO, WTO, and the WEF must also respect.

Furthermore, the Treaty of Rome 1957, acceded to by the UK in 1973 by joining the EU, also affected Canada until 2020. Another vital Treaty is the Statute of Rome

International Instrument, creating the International Criminal Court (ICC) in 1998 (to which the U.S.A. refused to participate9). It is ironic that Canadians have paid part of the ICC's legal establishment, yet in Canada, the peoples' rights have been and are still being abused by our governing bodies.10 11

We are in the midst of an epic social, cultural and political crisis that affects almost every developed country. We must look forward to the day when the collective people, as Head of State above the government, will be able to ensure and maintain peace, order and good governance once and for all! We would take pride in how we replaced a corrupt political and legal system by revamping democracy to suit the needs of the people rather than the greed of corporate and political interests. All aspects of life in Canada could be positively influenced by the SHIFT of political POWER from the elites to informed and engaged citizens!

This would even be the dawn of an era when the Indigenous Peoples of Canada would finally be treated with the respect they deserve and, along with the Canadian citizens, would make sure the horrors and transgressions of the past centuries remain in the history books.

We still have a lot of work to do. By uniting in our collective power, with all our wealth properly restored to us as the lawful shareholder and co-owners, we will be able to celebrate the true meaning of what Canada Day should be about!!!

The WHO Treaty Is Tied to a Global Digital Passport and ID System

By Aaron Kheriaty

The WHO recently announced plans for an international pandemic treaty tied to a digital passport and digital ID system. Meeting in December 2021 in a special session for only the second time since the WHO’s founding in 1948, the Health Assembly of the WHO adopted a single decision titled, “The World Together.”

The WHO plans to finalize the treaty by 2024. It will aim to shift governing authority now reserved to sovereign states to the WHO during a pandemic by legally binding member states to the WHO’s revised International Health Regulations.

In January of 2022 the United States submitted proposed amendments to the 2005 International Health Regulations, which bind all 194 UN member states, which the WHO director general accepted and forwarded to other member states. In contrast to amendments to our own constitution, these amendments will not require a two-thirds vote of our Senate, but a simple majority of the member states.

Most of the public is wholly unaware of these changes, which will impact the national sovereignty of member states.

The proposed amendments include, among others, the following. Among the changes the WHO will no longer need to consult with the state or attempt to obtain verification from the state where a reported event of concern (e.g., a new outbreak) is allegedly occurring before taking action on the basis of such reports (Article 9.1).

In addition to the authority to make the determination of a public health emergency of international concern under Article 12, the WHO will be granted additional powers to determine a public health emergency of regional concern, as well as a category referred to as an intermediate health alert.

The relevant state no longer needs to agree with the WHO Director General’s determination that an event constitutes a public health emergency of international concern. A new Emergency Committee will be constituted at the WHO, which the Director-General will consult in lieu of the state within whose territory the public health emergency of international concern has occurred, to declare the emergency over.

The amendments will also give “regional directors” within the WHO, rather than elected representatives of the relevant states, the legal authority to declare a Public Health Emergency of Regional Concern.

Also, when an event does not meet criteria for a public port of the U.S., appears to be responding to roadblocks that China erected in the early days of covid. This is a legitimate concern. But the net effect of the proposed amendments is a shift of power away from sovereign states, ours included, to unelected bureaucrats at the WHO. The thrust of every one of the changes is toward increased powers and centralized powers delegated to the WHO and away from member states.

Leslyn Lewis, a member of the Canadian parliament and lawyer with international experience, has warned that the treaty would also allow the WHO unilaterally to determine what constitutes a pandemic and declare when a pandemic is occurring. “We would end up with a one-size-fits-all approach for the entire world,” she cautioned. Under the proposed WHO plan, pandemics need not be limited to infectious diseases and could include, for example, a declared obesity crisis.

As part of this plan, the WHO has contracted German-based Deutsche Telekom subsidiary T-Systems to develop a global vaccine passport system, with plans to link every person on the planet to a QR code digital ID. “Vaccination certificates that are tamper-proof and digitally verifiable build trust. WHO is therefore supporting member states in building national and regional trust networks and verification technology,” explained Garret Mehl, head of the WHO’s Department of Digital Health and Innovation. “The WHO’s gateway service also serves as a bridge between regional systems. It can also be used as part of future vaccination campaigns and home-based records.”

This system will be universal, mandatory, transnational, and operated by unelected bureaucrats in a captured NGO who already bungled the covid pandemic response.

health emergency of international concern but the WHO Director-General determines it requires heightened awareness and a potential international public health response, he may determine at any time to issue an “intermediate public health alert” to states and consult the WHO’s Emergency Committee. The criteria for this category are simple fiat: “the Director-General has determined it requires heightened international awareness and a potential international public health response.”

Over 500 Excess Heart Deaths A Week In England Since COVID-19 Began

By Alexander Zhang

More than 500 additional deaths a week involving heart diseases have been recorded in England since the COVID-19 pandemic began, the British Heart Foundation (BHF) has said.

Based on data from the Office for Health Improvement and Disparities, the BHF revealed in a report that, since February 2020, there has been a total of 96,540 excess deaths involving cardiovascular conditions—an umbrella term for a range of heart and blood vessel conditions, including heart attacks and strokes.

“It is deeply troubling that so many more people with cardiovascular disease have lost their lives over the past three years,” BHF Chief Executive Dr. Charmaine Griffiths said.

In the first year of the pandemic, COVID-19 infection drove high numbers of excess deaths involving cardiovascular disease.

While deaths from COVID-19 have since fallen year-on-year, the number of deaths involving cardiovascular disease have remained high above expected levels, the BHF analysis stated.

Dr. Sonya Babu-Narayan, associate medical director at the BHF and consultant cardiologist, said, “COVID-19 no longer fully explains the significant numbers of excess deaths involving cardiovascular disease.”

She said there may have been other contributing factors, including the disruptions to the NHS over the past few years.

NHS Disruption

The charity said a major contributing factor has been the “severe, ongoing disruption” to heart care in the NHS.

The number of people waiting for time-sensitive cardiac care was at a record high of nearly 390,000 at the end of April in England, according to NHS England.

Average ambulance response times for heart attacks and strokes have consistently been more than 30 minutes since the beginning of 2022.

There has also been significant disruption to the detection and management of high blood pressure and other conditions that put people at much greater risk of a heart attack or stroke, the charity said.

Babu-Narayan said: “Long waits for heart care are dangerous—they put someone at increased risk of avoidable hospital admission, disability due to heart failure, and premature death. Yet people are struggling to get potentially life-saving heart treatment when they need it due to a lack of NHS staff and space, despite cardiovascular disease affecting record numbers of people.”

Vaccine Link

The BHF also said that COVID-19 may potentially have caused a rise in heart problems. It cited a separate study showing that those who were infected before the vaccine rollout were five times more likely to die in the 18 months after infection.

Some studies have linked myocardial inflammation to the mRNA vaccines, but the BHF played down the risks posed by vaccines.

“COVID-19 vaccine associated myocarditis has been rare, more common in young men after a second vaccine dose, and fortunately shows a favourable clinical course in the vast majority of those affected.

“Myocarditis can cause heart scarring that can be detected with cardiac MRI—to mitigate the small chance of scarring causing a life-threatening arrhythmia in the future, it is likely that affected individuals will be offered long-term follow-up and monitoring,” it stated.

Between December 2020 and February 2023, the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency recorded 72 UK deaths suspected to be related to the COVID-19 vaccine.

But the BHF said, “The benefits of receiving COVID-19 vaccines in reducing severe outcomes from COVID-19 infection in people living with cardiovascular disease greatly outweigh the risk of extremely rare side effects.”

‘Not Surprising’

Professor John Greenwood, president of the British Cardiovascular Society, said: “The high numbers of excess cardiovascular disease (CVD) deaths published today are worrying, but unfortunately not surprising. We know that COVID-19 has caused direct (COVID-19 leading to new CVD), indirect (reduced treatment and prevention of CVD), and long-term effects (CVD and Long COVID-19).”

Griffiths urged the government to “take control of this crisis” by “prioritising NHS heart care, better preventing heart disease and stroke, and powering science to unlock future treatments and cures.”

A government spokesperson said: “We are cutting waiting lists, ambulance response times are falling, staff increasing and we are improving access to blood pressure and health checks.

“We know there is more to do which is why we are consulting on a Major Conditions Strategy to tackle cardiovascular disease—including strokes and diabetes—and we have opened 108 community diagnostic centres that have delivered over 4 million tests, scans, and checks including for those with cardiovascular disease.

“The government is also working with NHS England to combat some of the causes of cardiovascular disease, with schemes to support increased physical activity, reduce obesity rates, and encourage people to stop smoking.”

Anything but the DEATHVAX. And know that it is far worse than the above-reported official data. Do NOT comply.

Drugs and Propaganda

By Gerald Heinrichs

According to Aldous Huxley, the tyrant of the future will use drugs and propaganda to convince the individual to “love his slavery”. Huxley explained as follows: “If you want to preserve your power indefinitely, you have to get the consent of the ruled. And this they will do partly by drugs, as I foresaw in Brave New World, and partly by these new techniques of propaganda”. Huxley believed that these two weapons would build the tyrant’s dream of an obedient society.

It is Canada’s strange fate that these things, drugs and propaganda, are hot-wire issues in 2023. Today’s drama is so intense that one might ask if Canada is fulfilling Huxley’s haunting prediction.

Canadians are living with a national government that is driven, more than any other, to instruct and educate its population. Foremost is the Liberal government’s agenda on climate action, gender politics, and “diversity, inclusion, and equity” sometimes called “DIE”. Almost daily, these agenda issues infiltrate federal directives big and small. To Liberal supporters, these agenda issues are golden truths. With a singular voice the supporters declare: the planet is on fire - transgender women are women - and DIE must be the Bible of every institution. Along with CBC this is dutifully supported by Canada’s mainstream media, who were paid $595 million by the Liberal government in 2019, and much more since. According to Minister Pablo Rodriguez, paying this money to so-called “Qualified Canadian Journalism Organizations” is done to ensure “reliable and credible information”. Some may believe this, but many critics call mainstream media echo-chamber news - and now and again, propaganda.

Today many Canadians have criticisms of climate action, gender ideology and DIE. Many sensible people believe these issues have often become radical and illogical. But the Liberals have little tolerance for dissent. They have no interest in robust and wide-open debate. And so these opponents are now in the cross hairs of a Liberal censorship assault. As the saying goes: propaganda is impossible without censorship.

In their own party platform, the Liberals have stated they intend to “put a stop to harmful online content” and “tackle extreme and harmful speech”. Western Standard reports that Minister Rodriguez “remains determined to suppress speech the prime minister described as ‘destabilizing for democracy’” - a startling comment. It turns on its head the US Supreme Court statement that, “government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable.”

These Liberal censorship promises have been put into action. In 2022 the Twitter Files disclosed over 200 episodes where the Liberal government asked social media companies to delete data, at times complaining the material was “offensive”. More substantially, in 2023, the Liberal government rolled out censorship powers in the Online Streaming Act and the Online News Act. And more is coming. Before year end, Canadians can expect to see the Online Harms Act together with its ominous Digital Safety Commissioner. Friends of the Liberals though, have little to fear because the Liberals are in favour of speech they like. But real freedom of expression in Canada is in jeopardy. So much so that Elon Musk recently advocated for “a new government in Canada” that would respect free speech rights. Musk believes in a marketplace of ideas - or as George Orwell explained, “If liberty means anything at all, it means the right to tell people what they do not want to hear.” Meanwhile, as if to follow Huxley’s prediction, Canada’s Liberal government has also become a world leader in legalizing and distributing illicit drugs. Indeed the Liberal government will not condemn drugs and states it will invest millions in “public education to reduce the stigma”. Cannabis was legalized in 2019 and today over 3,700 stores sell the products across the land. But almost in an instant, drugs like fentanyl were decriminalized in British Columbia. And just as fast, radical policies unfolded for so-called “safer supply” of drugs, and “safe injection sites”. The National Post recently said these Liberal policies “could have been devised by the drug cartels”. Similarly, the Washington

Examiner says the Liberal drug policies are “controlled by a clique of ideologically driven researchers who simply do not believe that rehabilitation is possible” and who “push for hyper-libertarian policies that minimize exposure to recovery-based treatments”. Canadians are now observing an avalanche of drugs - all sponsored by a Liberal government that claims more and better drugs will cure addiction, and that enabling addicts is a form of healing them. Drastic things are happening in Canada.

But this Liberal drug policy fits hand in glove with the Liberal censorship policy. Two dystopian novels predicted that drugs, like censorship, would be used to stifle opposition. In Brave New World the drug “soma” is distributed to create conformity and “stability”. And in Lois Lowry’s novel The Giver, drugs are handed out to prevent dissension or “stirrings”. The novels present a depraved but simple message: a fried society is a compliant society. Or in the Canadian context: drug addicts don’t organize freedom convoys.

Very recently, drugs and censorship have washed over Canadians like a fast-water tide. In their own way, each of these weapons attempt to make Canadians more compliant and less resistant. But in truth they are attacks on bedrock principles. These are turbulent times and Canadians are searching for answers.

What is the Truth About Residential Schools in Canada?

By James Balkwill

The government of Canada is strongly being urged to consider implementing legal mechanisms to combat residential school denialism based on a new report from Kimberly Murray, the Independent Special Interlocutor on Missing Children and Unmarked Graves.

No one is denying that residential schools existed, what people are concerned about is that the narrative being sold to us has been embellished and is quite simply, not the truth. People with legitimate questions are being denied any opportunity to have their questions addressed. In fact, what we see is that much of the historical record of residential school information will be destroyed.

I have no special investigative skills but in reviewing the historical records for myself, have found that the residential school story we have been told is questionable. For instance, the Truth and Reconciliation Commissions Report compares a student’s having survived a residential school experience as comparable to a person having survived WWII. I have asked many actuaries here in Canada, all of whom have said that the two lack any commonality and are not comparable.

I would like to have somebody in government explain how they’re able to embellish the facts surrounding residential schools. I say that because if we accept the truth and reconciliation report, it states that residential schools operated in Canada for 120 years and there were 139 residential schools and that some 4200 to 4500 students went missing or did not come home during that time. Now senator/commissioner Sinclair stated that maybe up to 6000 children could not be accounted for, so let’s use Senator Sinclair’s number of 6000. 6000 students divided by 120 years equals 50 students per year divided by 139 residential schools equals 0.359. So, let’s round it up to 0.36. The result accepting their numbers is that just over 1/3 of a student per school per year went missing.

The failure here is that this is being presented to the people of Canada as if only indigenous students went missing, did not come home or died at school. The writers of this report also fail to consider the impact of the illnesses and pandemics that swept across Canada such as the Spanish flu which took the lives of 50,000 Canadians and was especially hard on children five years of age and under.

Mainstream media including the CBC allowed for all kinds of allegations to be made by the indigenous community against non-indigenous Canadians. We have been accused of genocide without any evidence to support the allegations. I, like many other proud Canadians, took offence to that and decided to uncover the facts for ourselves. Given not one exhumation has been conducted and no forensic science has been applied to determine cause of death, makes this a very unfair situation to Canadians who actually care about what the truth is.

25% of People Think “Covid a Hoax”

By Mathew Aldred

“The UK is home to millions more conspiracy theorists than most people realise, with almost a quarter of the population believing Covid-19 was probably or definitely a hoax, polling has revealed.”
“Three out of 10 people thought the “Great Reset” initiative announced by the World Economic Forum in 2020 was a conspiracy to impose a totalitarian world government. Between a fifth and a quarter of people — 8 million to 10 million adults — said they would protest against the introduction of central bank digital currencies, a “deep state” of military, intelligence and government officials who try to secretly manipulate government policy, “15-minute cities” and against vaccines.” — Robert Booth @ The Guardian

I won’t bore you with the rest of the drivel in this article, which is intended to associate anyone questioning the government psyops with racism and utter lunacy (didn’t The Guardian once brand itself as anti-establishment?); where have we heard this sort of propaganda before, Canadians?
Unfortunately, the survey isn’t nuanced enough (obviously, propaganda never is) to explain what exactly those surveyed understand by the question about “hoax” or what exactly they understand by the plans of the globalist WEF Elite$ at Davos. Still, overall, the article is brilliant (for us). Why? Because I’ve been trying to work out how many people we have already awakened. 25-30% is wonderful. I was concerned that it might be as little as 5% (and then we would have a very, very long way to go in winning the information war). This is a great win for the dissidents.
By the way, doesn’t it show how we are not up against the greatest minds in the world? Conducting this survey (and publishing it) was a huge tactical blunder. They should have just continued with the “fringe minority, extremist” propaganda, which serves to isolate and gaslight people.
Celebrate, my friends. Share with any “doomers” you know, and cheer them up (if you can’t, just let them go, they are bringing you down; sorry to be so blunt).
But don’t rest on your laurels. There is still a long way to go. The Elite$ know that it is not simply some jabs that are at stake here; it is everything they have planned for us. In their hubris they overreached and exposed themselves; they are now wounded and vulnerable like never before, and are likely to get very aggressive as they fight for all the systems and structures they have built up over the millennia (it’s hard to believe, but history shows they can get a whole lot more aggressive than they have already).

And there is a great deal of educational work to do with the 30% and growing army; otherwise, many will fall for the next demagogue that breaks rank with the Elite$ and pretends to speak for the plebs. In short, we need to use this moment to increase decentralization and the idea of the self-sovereign individual. More on this in future articles.
But this is a moment to celebrate. We are on our way. ‘

Gays Against Groomers’ Official Stance on Pride

By GaysAgainstGroomers.com

Years ago, Pride was about LGBT people stepping out to show the world we are normal people deserving of equality and marriage rights. We wanted the world to see that same sex relationships were not a threat, and in fact resembled the dynamic of straight relationships in many ways. We marched for our rights, and in 2004 the first legal gay marriage in the US was performed in Cambridge, MA. In June of 2015, the US Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that the US Constitution guarantees the right for same-sex couples to marry in all 50 US states.
We had endured an excruciatingly drawn out battle, so there was all the more reason to celebrate the anniversary of legal same-sex marriage every June. But as the years went by, this celebration morphed from one of love and equality to a raunchy display of overt sexuality and debauchery in our name. We became tired of the predictive pandering from companies looking to exploit us for profit by pretending to support us. We found ourselves exhausted by fellow members of our community who put their sexuality on a pedestal as if it were their singular personality trait. And most of all, we find ourselves incredibly disturbed by the inclusion of children in these annual sexual exhibitions.
Gays Against Groomers is comprised of LGB and T individuals who feel like our community has gone too far. We believe there is a firm difference between education versus indoctrination, inclusivity versus pandering, and celebrating your right to marry versus exhibiting disgusting behaviors meant for the privacy of your own home. We are the LGB and T people who don’t make our sexuality our dominant attribute, who don’t need the world to accept us, and are satisfied with our current rights. We don’t go along with the mainstream narrative regarding our community. Because of this, we face an onslaught of character assassinations daily, something we’ve grown numb to.

Not only do we find Pride unnecessary now, we are concerned by the exposure of inherently sexual materials that fall under the LGBT umbrella to children. In the past, we have seen young children brought to parades where grown adults are selling sex toys, hardly dressed, and displaying inappropriate behavior many minors should not be witnessing. In this day and age, many believe this is a form of empowerment, and a way to educate children with “sex positivity.” In reality, we are looking at the destruction of innocence right before our eyes, and we won’t be silent about it.
Each year Pride seems to go on a little longer. It’s not just Pride month now, it’s Pride “season.” We firmly believe this is completely unnecessary. We are appalled by scenes like half naked performers taking money from young children like strippers, or kids being taught how to pole dance, or seeing This Book is Gay being given to minors. Children are being indoctrinated, sexualized and even medicalized in the name of “LGBTQ acceptance.” The slippery slope has become a very real phenomena and we are on a dark road to legal pedophilia.
Gays Against Groomers will not let this happen without a fight. We are here to stand against it all and hold the line and our community accountable. While this is something that has to happen from inside of our community to be effective, we appreciate any and all support in our efforts to hold the line and save the innocence of children. The right thing is not always popular, but we will persevere.

What is the Greatest Army in the World?

By David Sorenson

It’s not China, America, Russia or North Korea. The greatest army in the world is the hundreds of millions of people worldwide who are taking a stand against tyranny. They have the greatest power all over the world.
The millions of people in France, the millions of people in Germany, the millions of people in the UK, the millions of people in America, the millions of people in Brazil, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Eastern Europe, Asia, etc.
We are the force that will change the course of history. We are the power that will overthrow their deception. We are the army of those who speak truth to humanity.

That’s why they are so terrified of us. They want to shut us down. Label us conspiracy theorists, domestic terrorists, spreaders of misinformation, extremists. Because we frighten them.
Your power is greater than their tyranny. Your voice can take them down. Your prayers will end their rule. Your love will shatter their hatred.
Don’t be afraid. Don’t back down. Don’t hide. Don’t be afraid of them. They are afraid of you.
The 0.0003% of elitists who have been suffocating, abusing, murdering, terrorizing, torturing, impoverishing, poisoning, and deceiving all of humanity are being exposed.
They know how vastly outnumbered they are. They see the worldwide awakening that’s happening. They see how they have lost control. That’s why they desperately try to shut everyone down, by rushing their agenda of imposing digital currencies and digital ID’s. This exposes them even more. It reveals their evil hearts for all to see. Even the sleeping masses are starting to sense something...
Keep speaking. Keep shouting. Keep raising the sound of deliverance. Keep spreading truth by all means. Keep showing humanity what is going on.

Give hope to the downtrodden. Speak life to those that are desperate. Lift them up. Don’t proclaim the victory of the wicked, but declare their downfall. Use your spiritual authority to herald the defeat of evil and announce the victory of good.
We are the greatest army in the whole world. There is nothing like us. Hell is terrified because we have Heaven on our side.
Stand up, speak truth, don’t back down, let the light shine. The new day will come.

Absurdity Observer

Some Of The Most Absurd Things That Have Happened In Recent Weeks

- Delta Air, who claimed to be “the world’s first carbon-neutral airline,” is facing a lawsuit after an investigation finds their claims to be “false and misleading.” The investigation into the “carbon credit” scheme the airline used found that “nearly all offsets issued by the voluntary carbon offset market overpromise and underdeliver on their total carbon impact.”
- Health officials delayed a key report linking fluoride to brain harm. After a 6-year systematic review of fluoride’s impact on the developing brain, a court order has led to The National Toxicology Program making public their finalized report that was blocked by the US Department of Health and Human Services leadership and concealed from the public for nearly a year. The NTP reported that 52 of 55 studies found decreases in children’s IQ associated with an increase in fluoride.
- A study published in Cureus titled “Estimation of Excess Mortality in Germany During 2020-2022 (Kuhbandner et al.) finds a strong correlation between the increase in mortality rates within the country and the introduction of COVID-19 vaccines. As the authors noted, “The results show that the observed number of deaths in 2020 was close to the expected number with respect to the empirical standard deviation... By contrast, in 2021, the observed number of deaths was two empirical standard deviations above the expected number and even more than four times the empirical standard deviation in 2022.” Additionally, the authors noted that excess mortality shot up in groups below 30-years-old (where typically no excess mortality occurs) from April 2021 onward. A similar mortality pattern was observed for stillbirths, with an increase of 19.4% in the fourth quarter of the year 2021 compared to previous years.
- The WHO has announced its plans for an international pandemic treaty tied to a digital passport and digital ID system. The plan, slated to be finalized by 2024, aims to shift governing authority from sovereign states to the WHO during a pandemic by legally binding member states to their revised International Health Regulations. German-based Deutsche Telekom subsidiary T-Systems has been contracted to develop a global vaccine passport system that links every person on the planet to a QR code digital ID so compliant subjects can “move around as safely as possible” during present and future health threats.
- Canada Bread (McCain) has admitted to colluding with rival Weston Foods (Loblaws) to set Canadian bread prices, ending a seven-year investigation into one of the largest price-fixing scandals in the country’s history.
- Washington State issues a bill to become a “sanctuary state” for child sex changes. Senate Bill 5599 would allow host homes to provide housing for runaway transgender minors without being required to notify their parents in some instances. The bill would also allow transgender minors to seek “gender-affirming” health care.

- Planned Parenthood is suspended by the Saskatchewan government from giving school presentations after “Sex from A-Z” cards describing graphic sexual acts were presented in a grade 9 class in Lumsden. The set of cards is “intended for gay, bi, and queer young people” to help discuss topics in a “sex-positive, identity-affirming context.” (Note: The content of these cards is far too vile to even give examples here, they are certainly not child-friendly.)
- One year after Canada made it illegal to “condone,

- deny or downplay the Holocaust,” an interim report by the federal government reveals plans to also make questioning the narrative of unmarked mass graves near residential schools illegal by categorizing these thoughts as “hate speech.”
- An article recently published to Case Rep Ophthalmol titled “Ocular Surface Erosion after Suspected Exposure to Evaporated COVID-19 Vaccine” (Chantra et al.) describes a disturbing incident that occurred during a vaccination campaign where a nurse accidentally broke a vial of vaccine: 15 out of the 20 people in the room were diagnosed with “ocular surface erosion” after experiencing symptoms such as red eyes and a rash within hours of exposure.
 - A FOIA request by Blacklock’s Reporter revealed that, as early as 2021, the Privy Council Office sought to downplay vaccine injuries and other adverse events to “maximize public confidence in the safety of the COVID vaccine.” In the memo, titled “Testing behaviourally informed messaging in response to severe adverse events following immunization” the memo suggested skewing statistics to minimize the impact of vaccine deaths or injuries. The memo further noted, “different framings of the exact same risk can drastically affect a person’s decision and percep-

- After MPs passed a motion requiring the Liberal government to let them see the COVID-19 vaccine contracts the federal government made with big pharma, the cabinet is now demanding MPs sign an NDA if they wish to see the terms of the COVID-19 vaccine contracts so that the public never learns the truth.
 - A terminally-ill woman in Alberta, who had been denied a place on an organ transplant list because she is not vaccinated against COVID-19, has now had her case dismissed by the Supreme Court of Canada. The Alberta Court of Queen’s Bench and the Alberta Court of Appeal also ruled against her, stating that the Charter and Bill of Rights do not cover the specific Covid-19 vaccine policies. Having exhausted all her legal options in Canada, Sheila Annette Lewis has now started a fundraiser to obtain surgery in the US.
 - Dr. Patrick Phillips, an Ontario-based physician, has just been issued a fine of $6,000 and had his medical license revoked by the CPSO over his vocal opposition to Covid-related public health measures.
 - Despite a nursing shortage, a London Health Sciences Centre nurse is facing termination for refusing to get a COVID-19 vaccine. The nurse, Sandra Hartman, was on maternity leave in 2021 and recently returned to work only to be put on unpaid leave for declining to be vaccinated against the coronavirus.
 - Sources within the US government reveal that the earliest three people believed to have been infected with SARS-CoV-2 in the fall of 2019 were all members of the Wuhan lab who worked closely on coronavirus research: Ben Hu, Yu Ping, and Yan Zhu. As reported by Public and Racket, all three were working with the closest relatives of SARS-CoV-2, inserting gain-of-function features unique to it, and all three were co-authors on the journal article published pre-COVID titled “Discovery of a rich gene pool of bat coronaviruses provides new insights into the origin of SARS coronavirus” (Hu et al.) The lead author, Hu, also co-authored a 2017 paper on chimeric bat coronaviruses with Peter Daszak, the head of EcoHealth Alliance, which was funded in part by the NIH.
 - A study by the Cleveland Clinic published in OFID titled “Effectiveness of the Coronavirus Disease 2019 Bivalent Vaccine” (Shrestha et al.) finds that, while the vaccine appeared to work in the first few weeks, after that the vaccine had negative efficacy. As the authors of the study put it, the “risk of COVID-19 increased with time since most recent prior COVID-19 episode and with the number of vaccine doses previously received.” Another study published in April of this year to Vaccines (Uversky et al.) may help explain why. The study concludes, “Ig4 levels detected after repeated vaccination with the mRNA vaccines may not be a protective mechanism; rather, it constitutes an immune tolerance mechanism to the spike protein that could promote unopposed SARS-CoV2 infection and replication by suppressing natural antiviral responses.”
